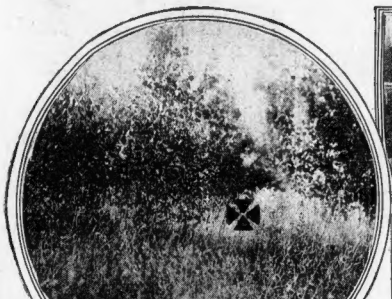
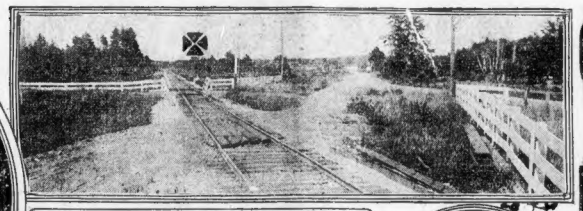
SOME OF MISSING WOMAN'S CLOTHING FOUND, CAUSES FEAR OF FOUL PLAY

WAS LOST MISS TUCKER SLAIN?



Cross shows where bundle was found, and where Miss Tucker is supposed to have slept Thursday night.



Allen N. Cathcart, last man who saw Miss Tucker in Lebanon.

Great Search Organized for Teacher Whose Fate is Involved in Deep Mystery—Shoes and Skirt Found Near Railroad Track.

Special to the Boston American.

WOLFBORO, N. H., Aug. 4.—By the discovery of a pair of low shoes and a black underskirt, believed to have been worn by Miss Mary A. Tucker, the Providence school teacher who has been missing ten days from Camp Ossipee, a new turn is given to the mystery surrounding the girl's disappearance. Foul play is now a theory of the searchers for the girl or her body.

It is feared that Miss Tucker may have fallen into the hands of tramps, who have been seen in the locality between Sanbornville and Cotton Valley, where shoes and the underskirt belonging to her were found.

Miss Tucker had $15 when she left the camp. Whether this proved an attraction to the tramps who felt secure to accomplish their purpose of robbery in the wilds of this sparsely settled country, or whether she is forcibly detained in the hope of securing the reward for her recovery, are questions which the searchers are anxiously considering.

At dawn to-morrow morning 300 men under the direction of M. E. Eastman, who represents the Faunce family, will start out from various towns.

MISSING GIRL'S SHOES.

Alvah Wiggin, section foreman on the Boston & Maine railroad found the shoes and the black underskirt on the railroad track about one-quarter of a mile from Cotton Valley station last Tuesday.

The shoes were made by Pierce & Son, Providence, and were size No. 4.

At the residence of George Faunce in Lynn, where Dr. David W. Faunce, stepfather of Miss Tucker, and his wife are stopping, it was said that Miss Tucker wore a size four and that she bought her shoes in Providence.

She wore low shoes when she left the camp.

Foreman Wiggin says that he saw a woman whose description fits that of Miss Tucker on Wednesday, July 26, the day after she disappeared.

It was about 7 o'clock in the morning. The woman had been walking on the railroad track. When she saw Wiggin she disappeared.

Thought Actions Queer.

Wiggin thought that the woman's actions were very queer but he thought nothing more about it until he found the shoes and the underskirt. They showed little signs of wear. Then he remembered reading about Miss Tucker and became convinced that he had seen the woman. He communicated with Wolfeboro to-day.

If Miss Tucker is walking about the woods and has been for the last nine days she is without covering for her feet and must by this time have suffered greatly.

Sanborville is but a short distance from the towns of Milton, Union, Hays and Rochester, where Miss Tucker is reported to have been seen several times up to last Saturday, when all trace of her was lost.

Mr. Eastman has laid the most careful plans to have the ground covered minutely and has mapped out plans for each squad. As he plans it, they will make an early start, and each will work over its own territory.

MANY CAMPS IN WOODS.

Somersworth, Rochester and Lebanon, Me., authorities have promised their assistance. There are several unoccupied camps in the woods about these towns which will be visited.

Deputy Sheriff Fred Spencer of Berwick has telephoned that he has raised a squad of fifty men to aid the work.

They will take care of Maine territory.

Despite the fact that no accurate information has been received concerning Miss Tucker, the people are confident that she will be located somewhere within a radius of fifteen miles of Rochester. Many believe that she has been wandering aimlessly back and forth over the same territory.

It was on Tuesday, July 25, that Miss Tucker left the camp at Ossipee where she was stopping with Dr. and Mrs. Faunce. It was after 8 o'clock when she was missed, and a search was immediately begun in the darkness.

She was not found next morning, large bands sent in every direction. As she is the step-sister of President Faunce of Brown University, great interest was taken in the case by the townspeople. Every town made efforts to find the woman. They failed.

PERSONS AND SCENES FIGURING IN CASE OF MISSING MISS TUCKER

The cross near the railroad crossing shows where Miss Tucker was last seen by Mrs. McNally Friday morning. The old Sawtelle road branches off at the right. It was down this road that Isaac Sawtelle carried his brother Hiram to the spot where he buried the body after murdering him. There is a little road running from Sawtelle road into the woods, which it is thought Miss Tucker took.

CLASH OF 2 STATES IS FEARED

Reinforcement Made by Gov. Vardaman to Yellow Fever Guard of Mississippi.

DISEASE STILL SPREADS

Special to the Boston American.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 4.—The act of Governor Vardaman of Mississippi in ordering out more troops to reinforce the soldier guard against yellow fever on the gulf coast and along the river has again turned attention to the possibility of a clash between the armed forces of Mississippi and Louisiana. Meanwhile the actual fever situation is worse; the yellow death is spreading despite the efforts to check it.

The dispatch received here from Jackson, Miss., says Governor Vardaman has issued strict orders to the new troops ordered out to bar all fever suspects and to preserve a rigid quarantine. Eighteen men from the Wesson company passed through here to-day on this new quarantine duty. The Governor has told Adjutant Fridge that if more men are needed he will order them out.

Weather Conditions.

The weather here is such as to make the spread of yellow fever more rapid than ever. It is hot and disagreeable and all the efforts of medical science to prevent further infection have thus far proved without effect. There were fifty-four new cases shown in the last report and five deaths. This death list is not so great as the day or so ago, but there are more new cases.

There have been reports that a clash between the armed forces of Mississippi and Louisiana, now guarding the lines and the river front, was imminent. But attention is now attracted more by the spread of the disease and to the fact that United States mail is tied up in Louisiana than by anything else.

The last dispatch sent from Rigolets, the centre of the friction between the armed guards, said that the armed launch, Grace, flagship of the Mississippi flotilla, had been overtaken and surrounded by the Louisiana fleet, consisting of the launches Majestic, Macolo, Security, Baton Rouge, Louisiana and New Orleans, all carrying Colt automatic rapid-fire guns.

WON'T SURRENDER PEACEABLY.

The commander of the Louisiana forces, Lieutenant T. D. Miller, was reported to be waiting for daylight to attempt the capture of the whole Mississippi squadron.

The Mississippi boats are manned by sturdy backwoodsmen, selected for their daring and utter disregard for human life.

Russian Army of 3,200 Men Capitulates.

SAGHALIEN FOR JAPS

Surrender of the Entire Body of Czar's Soldiery After Many Days' Fighting.

TOKIO, Aug. 4.—All of Saghalien Island has surrendered to the Japanese invading army. This is the first Russian territory which has been taken by Japan and gives her a dominating position on the Siberian coast.

The fighting which resulted in the surrender continued actively for several weeks, and bitterly for a week. A report to the War Department here from the Japanese headquarters in the field gives these details of the surrender:

"An independent cavalry column on the afternoon of July 28 attacked the enemy south of Palen and routed him, driving him southward, capturing two field guns besides a number of rifles and a quantity of ammunition.

"On July 29 the cavalry, being reinforced, vigorously pursued the enemy south of Tayian, which lies 25 miles south of Rykoff. The enemy halted on Onoi, twenty-five miles south of Tayian, and at 5 o'clock on the morning of July 30 sent a letter under a flag of truce to the Japanese commanding officer (upon General Liapnoff, the Russian Governor, saying that the lack of bandage material and medicines and the consequent inability to succor the wounded compelled him from a sense of humanity to terminate hostilities.

"The commander of the Japanese force replied, demanding the delivery of all war supplies and property of the Russian government, the uninjured, and the delivery of all maps, records and papers relating to the Russian civil and military administration and requiring their delivery in reply at 10 o'clock on the morning

MORE FREE TICKETS TO PARAGON PARK

Boston Sunday American Will Give Away Another Set of Coupons.

FOUR SHOWS INCLUDED

In next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN there will be printed five more free tickets to Paragon Park. These tickets will be good on Monday or Tuesday, August 7 and 8, for the following admissions:

To Paragon Park.
To the Paragon Theatre.
To the Merry-Go-Round.
To the Haunted Swing.
To the Temple of Mirth.

There is no time limit Monday nor Tuesday on these tickets. They will be good, day or evening, up to the time the park closes.

Perhaps last Monday or Tuesday, when the AMERICAN gave similar tickets, you did not take advantage of them on account of the unfavorable weather.

Better Weather Next Week.

Well, the prospect now is for better weather at Nantasket Beach. So make your plans this week to cut out the tickets from the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN and use them either Monday or Tuesday for the BOSTON AMERICAN visit to the Park.

Remember this, too.

The ticket of admission alone provides you with much free entertainment, which goes with the admission. There is the open-air circus. Features next week will be the Zoellers, high trapeze artists; Polk and Trevk, European gymnasts, and Fowber, the slack wire juggler.

Wants Hundreds of Guests.

Then there are the band concerts, the quaint Japanese village, the brilliant electrical illumination at night and all the life and merriment that is so much a part of this beautiful resort.

In spite of the bad weather of last Monday and Tuesday hundreds of people used the BOSTON AMERICAN tickets to give themselves a delightful time, free of expense, at Paragon Park. With the pleasant weather—which the Weather Man has solemnly pledged to provide for the future—the BOSTON AMERICAN looks forward with pleasure to being host to many more next Monday and Tuesday.

Whether you live in the busy whirl of the city or pursue the simple life in the country, cut out your Paragon Park tickets Sunday and enjoy yourself Monday or Tuesday at the park at the expense of the BOSTON AMERICAN.

CONVICTS TO EAT OFF POTTERY; NO TIN

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 4.—The 3,000 convicts in New York State Prisons will no longer eat from dishes of tin. For sanitary as well as humanitarian reasons, superintendent of Prisons Collins has substituted utensils of glazed white pottery.

FUSES REVEAL PLOT TO BLOW UP SHIP AT SEA

FOUND IN CARGO OF COAL, WHERE IT WAS PLANNED TO IGNITE GAS ON FREIGHTER.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 4.—The story of an attempt to blow up a ship in mid-ocean has been told here by Captain C. Touse of the French ship Asnel, which has arrived from Swansea, Wales, loaded with coal.

He left that port in January last, and six weeks later, when far out at sea, a dozen capped fuses, like those used by miners to explode charges of dynamite, were discovered in the hold of the ship among the coal.

Had one of the fuses become ignited by a shock in a part of the hold where coal gas had accumulated, the ship would undoubtedly have been blown to atoms.

Two or three of them had exploded, but fortunately at points where there was no gas, and consequently no damage was done.

The presence of the fuses among the coal was discovered only by accident.

WOODBRIDGE'S NOTE POINTS TO SUICIDE

Body of Oxford Graduate Found In the Surf Off Cohasset.

DESPONDENT OVER LOSSES

"It is no use. I am all in. My mind is failing me. May God bless you for your kindness to me. If I am knocked overboard it will be no worse fate than lots of others. Yours, W——"

This note, written by Professor A. A. Woodbridge, Oxford graduate, lecturer and insurance man, is the only explanation his friends and relatives have of his death. His body was found in the surf off Black Rock, Cohasset, on Tuesday. The note indicates suicide, and his friends have reluctantly concluded that he took his own life.

He was formerly superintendent of schools at Chelsea and Woburn. But as age began to whiten his hair and dim his mental powers he was compelled to turn his attention to other work—work for which he was unfitted and had no taste. He became an insurance solicitor.

Had Been Dependent.

Then came the death of his wife a year and a half ago, and since that time he had had no home. He had a room in Concord street, Mrs. Taylor, his landlady, said today that he had been without money for some time and was very despondent.

"If things get any worse," the old man, he was sixty-four—told Mrs. Taylor, "I will put an end to it all."

Then he showed her a small bottle which he always carried with him and which he gave her to understand contained poison. Whether he made use of the contents of the bottle is not known. He left the Concord street house on Tuesday of last week for Cohasset. There were tears in his eyes when he bade Mrs. Taylor good-by, and it is probable that he believed then that he would never again see the woman who had been kind to him in his adversity.

Was Once Wealthy.

Of late years Professor Woodbridge had been connected with some of the largest insurance companies in the country. At one time he was manager for Rhode Island for the New York Life Insurance Company, and he also represented that company in Lowell. His connection with insurance companies terminated about two years ago, when he represented the Mutual Life of New York in Lowell.

Besides trying to sell insurance for the Penn Mutual, he had been selling annuities on the instalment plan. He has a cousin in Lynn, an uncle in Cliftonville and two daughters in East Boston.

Charles J. Woodbridge of No. 44 Central street, Lynn, the cousin, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"Professor Woodbridge was born in Newcastle, Maine, about sixty-four years ago. About fifteen years ago he was considered very wealthy, but lost all of his property by investing in a gold mine in Pittson, Maine. Since that time he had been despondent and I think that he must have committed suicide."

Professor Woodbridge was a Knight Templar and belonged to the Ranger Commandery. The police of Cohasset have charge of the body, and the Ranger Commandery will be notified.

MINISTERS AT SARATOGA TO FIGHT BETTING

Race Track Gamblers Worried by Movement Against Them of City's Clergymen.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Ministers have taken up the gambling situation and in the face of the inertia on the part of the authorities are prepared to present evidence to the grand jury in the hope of having the lid put down and kept down. They are also making charges of neglect of duty against the police commissioners.

Gamblers are worried by the latest turn of affairs.

That the betting is increasing in volume was proved to-day. Over $100,000 will have went into the betting ring before the last race and but $300 against $2,000 and made several other bets of the same amount on Mohawk 2d. He also gave commission of $5,000 to "Joe" Ullman to bet on the colt, who won handily. Whitcomb bet $2,000 on the colt. Gates won not less than $25,000. Jesse Lewisohn has $5,000 on Colorabatchie, who won at 4 to 5.

MRS. REBECCA EVANS OF READING.

Wife who says man threatened twice to shoot her, and who adds a new element to Somerville tragedy.

TRAGEDY POINTS WARNING TO MEN

BY REV. ALBERT E. GEORGE.

The tragedy in West Somerville does this, if anything: it makes apparent the corruption and weakness in human nature.

A private detective is shot down. Doubtless the accused had cause to be suspicious that he was being watched. He had convinced himself that he would be justified in taking life when his privacy was interfered with.

It is a terrible act to take human life. Every well-tempered mind accepts this. But as soon as any evil scheme overmasters a human being, he is blinded, and often does not care what he does.

A species of evil was apparently lurking in the breast of this man. It was playing fast and loose with him. It drove him into the atmosphere of suspicion. He has his revolver ready. The moment comes for action. He fires, and evil has conquered.

Murder is added to murder. Some overruling passion, it may be a thirst for revenge, paves the way towards it. We are often carried away with what we want to do, without dwelling upon the consequences.

Many a man awakens gradually to the fact that he is a murderer. Details of the murder make him sensitive after a while of the enormity of his crime. The mere event of the deed does not yield this impression at first. But it will be sure to come.

It is best never to place yourself in a position where your manner of living will be questioned. It is apt to bring other troubles. To get farther down the ladder may mean you sometime or other will touch the bottom, and then the truth of the situation will be made known.

Can you pity this man? To get yourself involved in such unfortunate circumstances leads to difficulty, and the only thing to do is to erect a sign over his pathway and paint "dangerous."

In spite of these broken, shattered lives around, the world is growing better. Only the truth is neglected, or rather trifled with, that you cannot play long with one type of evil without getting intimate with other types.

This may be moralizing, but it represents the personal history of many, and the constant recurrence of murder brings it out to view. If you desire to save yourself trouble, and the misfortune of others, you must study the cause of their downfall.

Every event like this present one, while horrible to relate, at the same time can react upon others who have not yet ventured to extremes. Nothing happens without some lesson. Even a murder can warn an undisciplined will, and while the sensation of it may grate upon our finer feelings, still it happens with its definite purpose. The morality of the community can often be made a forcible attraction, and it lingers over the wrecks and ruins of an ungovernable human passion.

SOUTH IN A PANIC OVER YELLOW FEVER

The vessels are not equipped with magazine guns, but the crews are fully armed with Winchester rifles and riot guns, and it seems hardly possible that bloodshed can be averted.

In enforcing their quarantine against Louisiana the Mississippi patrol boats had landed the waters of this State, coming up through Lake Borgne, chasing Louisiana sister and driving boats back into Lake Pontchartrain and into the Lake Borgne canal.

The following dispatch had been received from Bigelow late last night:

"Guardship on duty at the Pass; three detachments of naval reserves arrived late this afternoon and the patrol boat Wolverine, under Deputy Armstrong, is on duty awaiting orders.

FIRE AT FIRST HOSTILE MOVE.

"Commander Bostick and his staff will arrive on the yacht Marie, tendered to the authorities by Lawrence Fabacher.

"Commander Blount, on board the revenue cutter Grace, tendered to Mississippi some days ago as a guard boat by the Treasury Department, is stationed in Louisiana waters, inside the Louisiana and Nashville railroad bridge at the Rigolets, and has thus far refused to move.

"Captain Bostick and his staff, before leaving this city, had two Colt automatic guns mounted on the Marie, on which they started for the Rigolets.

"The Marie is cleared for action, and Captain Bostick has positive instructions to open fire on the Mississippians as soon as the latter make a hostile move.

"Capt. Borlick commanded the United States Monitor Passaic during the war with Spain. He is an experienced naval officer.

"The Mississippians, with the assistance of the United States revenue cutter Winslow, are holding eighteen Louisiana boats at the Ship Island quarantine station, and Capt. Bostick will attempt to liberate the imprisoned craft.

WILL FIGHT FOR RIGHTS.

The Louisiana troops have established a telegraph station near Old Fort McComb, the ruined fortress commanding the pass between Lake Borgne and Lake Pontchartrain, built just after the war of 1812, and neglected and deserted for over eighty years. Another station is near Fort Pike, at the Rigolets.

Governor Vardaman, of Mississippi, has declared that while he will see that the Mississippians obey the Louisiana laws and respect the Louisiana laws and the Louisiana territory, he will also see to it that Louisiana heeds the mandates of Mississippi with regard to the quarantine.

Governor Blanchard of Louisiana has declared that he will use the entire force of the State to preserve the rights of the Louisianians to fish and boat within Louisiana waters.

Governor Blanchard has sent this protest to Secretary of the Treasury Shaw in Washington:

"Gross discrimination in favor of Mississippi against Louisiana for United States revenue cutter Winona to act as she has been doing. Under pretence of quarantine duty, she has entered Louisiana waters and interfered with Louisiana shipping. She seems to be under the control of Dr. Wasdin, stationed at Gulfport, Miss.

"It is a contest between two States, and federal authorities should keep hands off."

Governor Blanchard then sent a stinging telegram to Dr. Wasdin asking idle interference and authority, and concluding:

"I deny your authority, and will expel from Louisiana water all such boats as the Winona."

There are fifty-four new cases of yellow fever reported here to-day.

WIFE SAYS EVANS TWICE THREATENED TO KILL HER

Woman Whose Marriage Was Annulled Makes a Serious Charge.

Man Held for Shooting Detective Given a Bad Character by Her.

Six-year old Irene Barber, Child of Man Whose Marital Troubles Were Cause of Tragedy.

Evidence that Joseph Evans, now under arrest in Somerville for shooting and killing George L. Fraser while the latter was trying to gain entrance to his home, has twice threatened to kill his second wife, from whom he has separated, is in the hands of the police.

Mrs. Rebecca Evans of Reading, his second wife, has told the police that she married Evans on December 24, 1903, and that in the following year, after numerous attacks and after he had taken all her money, he deserted her. She lived in fear of her life since Evans, as she declares, drew a revolver upon her in his mother's presence and declared:

"I'm through with you and I'll see your finish now."

Mrs. Evans says her husband has come to her house several times in the past year and that she did not dare refuse him shelter for fear he would kill her.

Evans secured an annulment of his marriage to her on the ground that her former husband, William Burnham, was living. She claims she told Evans before their marriage, that Burnham had another wife living when he married her and asked Evans if it was necessary for her to secure an annulment. He told her that it was not necessary.

A member of the firm of Elder & Whitman states that Evans came to them two years ago to have the property standing in his name transferred to his father's name because he was afraid of legal complications. Evans's mother has been complained of for a statutory offence. She is pledged to receive attachment on prosecution.

The hearing in Evans's case will be held on Aug. 14.

PEACE PROSPECTS BRIGHTER TO-DAY

of July 31, otherwise an attacking movement would immediately be started.

"Colonel Tolivitch, on behalf of Governor Liapanoff, met Colonel Kuloura, Japanese chief of staff, on the morning of July 31, and accepted the proposed terms.

"Governor Liapanoff, seventy officers and 3,200 men of the Russian garrison then surrendered.

"The guns, consisting of clothing, papers and military supplies, are now under investigation."

PEACE PROSPECTS APPEAR TO BE BRIGHTENING

By William Hoster.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Twenty-four hours' simmering has somewhat cleared the atmosphere around the Waldorf-Astoria and the St. Regis, where the Japanese and Russian peace envoys are quartered, and today there is current a belief that, notwithstanding the pessimistic views expressed by M. Witte upon his arrival in New York, the Portsmouth conference will result in peace.

The latest statements of the spokesmen of the two delegations materially help along this view. Jean Korostovitch, the Russian Foreign Office, who is acting as secretary and spokesman for M. Witte, when asked if his chief was in really acting as a courier of the Czar, said:

"Such a report is not true."

He was then told that the Japanese envoys regarded Witte's powers as ample to deal with the situations which will be presented at the conference.

"M. Witte," said Mr. Korostovitis, "comes clothed with full powers. He can decide on the question as they come up, if they are in his letter of instructions. I do not know whether points will come up which will have to be referred to the Czar.

Mr. Sato is Optimistic.

Down at the Waldorf-Astoria, Mr. Sato, director of the Japanese bureau of information, took an equally optimistic view of the situation.

"Do you still believe that the conference will result in peace?" he was asked.

"I think so," he replied. "There is no indication to the contrary. I have no doubt that M. Witte comes to the conference with full powers, although he will undoubtedly report the negotiations to his government before signing a contract as envoy that an amicable settlement will be reached."

"I do not believe," he remarked, "that the Japanese demands will be so exorbitant as to cause the failure of the conference."

"What is considered in an indemnity?" Mr. Sato was asked. "Does it mean the actual cost of the war?"

"That, and more," was the reply. "First, the actual expense of the war; after that, the cost of sending up the war, the aftermath, the interest on the war loans, etc."

It will readily be understood that if this opinion comes anywhere near expressing the position of the Japanese envoys on the subject of indemnity, Russia will be called upon to pay a sum approximately $750,000,000.

Witte Sees Roosevelt To-day.

M. Witte goes to Oyster Bay to-day to meet President Roosevelt informally. He is accompanied by Baron Rosen, Russian Ambassador at Washington and his colleague in the peace conference.

Some surprise was caused to-day when it was announced that President Roosevelt had changed the plans for the formal reception of the envoys of both belligerent nations at Oyster Bay to-morrow and that the Japanese would have precedence of half an hour over the Russians in presentation to the President. Heretofore the plan has been that the Russians should be received first.

It is understood that the change was made because Baron Komura was the first of the chief peace envoys to arrive in America.

MASSACRES IN SEVERAL VILLGES IN THE CAUCASUS

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—Private advices from the Caucasus report fearful conditions there. The people of several villages are said to have been massacred by Tartars. Epidemics of smallpox and cholera are prevailing. The Russian Government is doing nothing to relieve the suffering of the inhabitants.

TO KILL OFF CHINA BOYCOTT

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4.—John Barrett, the newly-appointed minister to China, is confident of every effort to settle the trouble, is here in connection with the commercial relations existing between the United States and China, particularly as regards the boycott inaugurated by Chinese guilds against American products.

Minister Barrett, while conceding that the Chinese guilds are all-powerful in their country, is of the opinion that the alarm shown by the people of this country over the action of the Chinese is unnecessarily exaggerated. He firmly believes that whatever grievance the Chinese guilds have will soon be dispelled when they are made to realize that our government is disposed to act fairly with them in the matter of immigration.

TRAIN RUNS THROUGH OPEN DRAWBRIDGE

Engineer Is Reported to Have Been Drowned in Queer Accident.

ON JERSEY CENTRAL ROAD

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—A suburban train from Atlantic City to New York over the Central railroad of New Jersey ran through a drawbridge crossing Newark bay to-day.

The engine was completely submerged in the bay, and the baggage car stuck out up in the mud. Three other coaches which completed the train were left badly wrecked on the tracks.

The engineer is reported to have been drowned, and it is said that a number of passengers have been injured as a result of the wreck.

The train was running across the Jersey meadows. It is not known why the engineer was unable to bring his train to a standstill when he discovered the draw was open but it is supposed that there was some trouble with the signals.

Newark Bay is wide and marshy and the Jersey Central trestle is several miles long. The draw is situated well out in the bay where the channel is located. It is at this point that the accident happened. It is known that the engineer did attempt to stop the train but the momentum was so great that the engine and baggage car plunged into the bay. The engineer stuck to his post at the throttle and drowned.

HELD FOR LIBEL, ENDS HIS LIFE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Held for the Grand Jury on a charge of criminal libel, in which there figured the names of some intimate friends of Miss Alice Roosevelt, Robert W. Criswell, editor of the New Yorker, a weekly paper, threw himself in front of a subway express at the Seventy-second Street Station and was instantly killed.

Mr. Griswell was one of the organizers of the Social Editors' Society and one of the founders of "America's Foremost Families," a book on the order of "America's Smart Set," now under investigation by District Attorney Jerome.

Criswell was arrested recently on a charge of criminal libel, preferred against him by Representative Joseph L. Rhinock of Columbus, O. In his publication Criswell had printed an article about the recent visit of Miss Alice Roosevelt to Cincinnati. He told of the various persons who were introduced in her private car, among them Mr. Rhinock, who, the article said, could have had been indicted for stealing money from a man on the race track.

Four Facts For Sick Women To Consider

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has an Unequalled Record of Cures—Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Is Confidential, Free, and always Helpful

FIRST.—That almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women has been rendered necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful menstruation, leucorrhœa, displacements of the womb, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing-down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

SECOND.—The medicine that holds the record for the largest number of absolute cures of female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates, strengthens and cures diseases of the female organism as nothing else can.

For thirty years it has been helping women to be strong, curing backache, nervousness, kidney troubles, all uterine and ovarian inflammation, weaknesses and displacements, regulating menstruation perfectly and overcoming its pains. It has also proved itself invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the change of life.

THIRD.—The great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

FOURTH.—Every ailing woman in the United States is asked to accept the following invitation. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women.—Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. From symptoms given, your trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised. Out of the vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Surely, any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

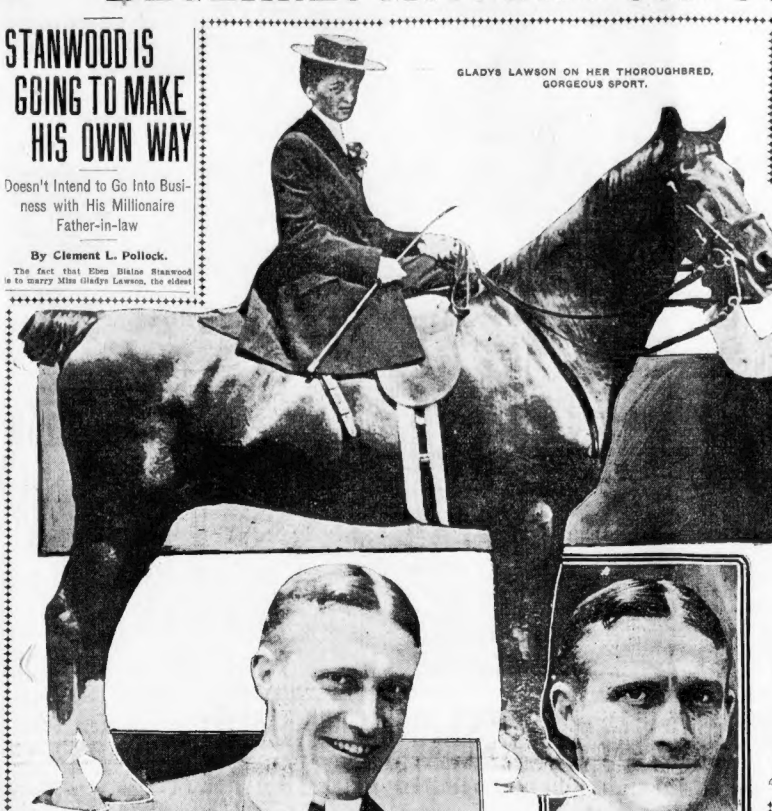
"SHALL KEEP ON SELLING PAPERS," DECLARES MISS LAWSON'S FIANCE

STANWOOD IS GOING TO MAKE HIS OWN WAY

Doesn't Intend to Go Into Business with His Millionaire Father-in-law

By Clement L. Pollock.

The fact that Eben Blaine Stanwood is to marry Miss Gladys Lawson, the eldest



GLADYS LAWSON ON HER THOROUGHBRED, GORGEOUS SPORT.

E. B. Stanwood.

He is well-built, moderately athletic, likes out-door sports and enjoys free country life.

He is well-read, up-to-date, and has opinions of his own on current questions.

He is cheerful, pleasant to meet, of happy disposition and ardent in his beliefs.

THOMAS W. LAWSON.

daughter of the famous financier and author, will be officially announced today at the home of the bride-to-be. This is the twenty-second anniversary of the birth of the young woman and it is planned to make the event a double one.

Because the news of the approaching marriage of the happy young couple leaked out prematurely, it will not detract from the enthusiasm of to-day's celebration at Dreamwold, the princely country estate of Thomas W. Lawson. It will add to the pleasure of the occasion.

Everybody is interested in the young man who is to become Mr. Lawson's son-in-law. After the broadsides of printer's ink that the State Street operator has fired against men who have endeavored to corner a goodly wad of the world's wealth, it was not supposed that any vagrant millionaire would dare strike to the hand of the charming young woman.

Another thing—Tom Lawson is thoroughly American—no foreign noblemen, with a cobwebby castle in need of repair, for his or his daughter's.

And young Mr. Stanwood, who is happy in having won the heart of the feminine chip of the old block, is neither the son of a millionaire nor has he any of the characteristics of some of the titled gentlemen who occasionally carry over the seas girls who should never go so far away from home.

I had a few minutes' chat with Mr. Stanwood and I never met a more pleasant young man in my life. And I feel really like congratulating Miss Lawson—of course I have already congratulated Mr. Stanwood.

Banks on Himself.

The first thing that you will read about Mr. Stanwood in most of the many accounts that will be written about this romance in the work-a-day world will be that he has the bluest blood of New England in his veins, and that he is a descendant of James G. Blaine. That is all very well—so long as the person in question does not bank altogether on it.

Stanwood doesn't. He is probably proud of most of his ancestors. But he is not the kind of man who thinks much beyond himself for anything. That was my impression, and I have seen a great many young men with money who could never to have had it, and vice versa.

This young man who is to marry Gladys Lawson, a girl with a million at least, works every day, like any other ambitious and happily constituted American. I don't believe that his salary is. He helps the Hotel & Railroad News Company distribute newspapers and other periodicals throughout New England. There are clerks in Mr. Lawson's office who get more pay.

When I found Stanwood he was at his desk in the office of the company at Sullivan square. The office is on the ground floor of the factory building, and is in easy hearing of the whizz of electric cars. There isn't anybody guarding him, and so I walked right in. He arose from his desk, sauntered into the hallway with me and chatted.

To start with, his appearance made a favorable impression on me. I don't know whether it was the alluring smile or the enticing voice, but there was a combination of something that made me feel at home with Stanwood at once.

He is about five feet nine or ten inches tall and weighs about 150 or 155 pounds. His is slender and has the appearance of being well knit without being [illegible]ncessarily athletic. He looks like [illegible] run a hundred yards in a little [illegible]conds without the fear of an attack [illegible]exy.

AMA.

True American [illegible]Panama [illegible]

His face is closely shaved [illegible] and a [illegible] cut, regular in featu[illegible] of the [illegible] old s[illegible] superfluous flesh. Illustrators could find in it a fine study for the young college man, the typical American, or many other types that would be certain to please.

There is the bronze complexion that comes from hours in the sun—maybe in the spacious grounds of Dreamwold. It hasn't the sunburned appearance of that of the young man who gets two weeks' vacation and comes back to work and peels off. It's the real thing—the result of regular hours of country and fresh air life. All of which shows that he doesn't work all the time.

The chief personal characteristic of the young man is his smile. It is not of the characterless kind that is childlike and bland, and masks a multitude of convictions and intentions, but a good, everyday, hearty smile that seems to

"I'm real glad to see you—won't you sit down?"

In the smile there is humor, too. That sense, without which life is a succession of Boston Sundays, he is blessed with. Behind the smile are two rows of teeth, small, even and very white. It is sort of boyishness in character, but not quite so unimpressive and probably to some extent, I think that Mr. Stanwood's eyes are blue. Maybe they are gray. Miss Lawson could tell you that. Anyhow he is more blonde than brunette. His hair is light brown and he wears it rather closely cut.

As to clothes—well, when I saw him he was hatless, coatless, vestless and the sleeves of his white shirt were rolled well up above his elbows. So I could not look at the clothes he did have on but his smile kept my eyes on his face.

A Boston boy is Stanwood, born and bred. He went to Andover, preparing for Harvard. He graduated four years ago and in about twenty-eight years of age. He took the general course at Harvard and was one of the average students. He didn't go in for any one thing especially and didn't become conspicuous for anything in particular, except his connection with the football team.

Stanwood was down for quarter in the football team right along and he entered most of the games all right, but the first thing the captain knew he was off the field—carried off. Nearly always Stanwood was knocked out early in the game and his understudy was a very busy young man.

Football and Baseball.

He played a little baseball, too, but he never made a home run when the score was three to three and there were two out and two strikes, and three balls on him. Every time when Stanwood found himself in this exact position he struck out. Most real Americans (this has no reference to the Boston team) do.

When Stanwood got out of college he found he had to go to work—that is, he found any money handed down to him, and if he had he would have gone to work just the same. His father is president of the news company and he started there. While in college many of the professions appealed to him. He likes business. He believes, too, that the happiest man in the world is he who works—the man who has something to accomplish and who arrives day by day to do it.

Mr. Stanwood knows a great many young men who do not, and he says he believes they would be much happier if they had never been born with silver spoons in their mouths. He talked to me about that, and there was a glow of enthusiasm in his face.

"But you know," he said naively, "I have never had the experience of having a lot of money handed down to me, so I can't speak authoritatively about that. But I believe in every man standing on his own feet, making his own way and working out his own happiness.

That's the creed of the young man who is to become the son-in-law of the author of "Frenzied Finance." And it has the same ring as the writings and speeches of the distinguished State street man.

Stanwood belongs to the Puritan Club, loves outdoor sports, knows this country pretty well, has never been abroad and has never taken any part to speak of in public matters. But he is a reader, and has a close touch with public events. I asked him this question:

"Have you read carefully the article that Mr. Lawson has written on the money question?"

"I have—I have read them closely."

"What do you think of his idea?"

"I think he is right. I think that his fight will be attended with great success, too."

acquainted with his fiancee and how he came to propose. They have lived pretty close together all their lives, but as a matter of fact he never met Miss Lawson until about a year and a half or two years ago. He doesn't recall the first meeting. Now what do you think of that?

Stanwood's career has been known their future sister-in-law for several years, however. When the young man was in college he did not pay much attention to girls. When he met Miss Gladys, however, it made his mind run in a new channel.

It was intended that the announcement of the approaching wedding should not be made until to-day. Stanwood had arranged to get out of town and have it all come out at Dreamwold among hugs and kisses and congratulations, with the co-star of the romance out in the country listening to the birds sing.

"When are you going to be married?" I asked.

"It is not decided yet," he replied, "but I think you might say some time in October."

Since the engagement of the young couple has been made public scores of Stanwood's friends have had him on the telephone, and they have had all sorts of congratulatory messages for him.

"Do you expect to go into other business after your wedding?" I asked.

"Not that I know of," he said. "I shall keep on selling papers."

He has a warm handshake. And his parting smile is with me yet.

SWEETHEART WILL BE TRUE TO CARLTON

Eleanor Vandeventer Declares She "Will Never Desert" Alleged Poisoner.

"FINEST MAN IN WORLD"

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—"I never will desert Mr. Micawber," said Mrs. Micawber in "David Copperfield."

There is a good deal of the mock tragedy of the wife of Dickens's eccentric character about Eleanor Vandeventer, who might be the tenth wife of Frederick Carlton if he were not in jail under suspicion of grand larceny, blackmail, bigamy and wife murder.

"He may be a 'Bluebeard,' a murderer, or anything else you choose to call him," said Mrs. Vandeventer in an interview with an AMERICAN reporter to-day, "but to me he is the finest man in the world, and I certainly never will forsake him."

Mrs. Vandeventer is under bonds to answer a charge also made against Carlton—that of violating a section of the penal code which prohibits the publication of improper photographs. Every day in the Raymond Street Jail, Brooklyn, she visits her sweetheart, whom Inspector Cross pronounces the most interesting and ingenious criminal he has ever had dealings with. To the man who probably intended to add her to his long list of women dupes she takes cigars and good things to eat.

Was Married Before.

Mrs. Vandeventer is a good-looking, slender young woman of about twenty-five years. She was married once, but that is another story. She knows the world and adjusts she is not easily fooled.

A brunette, her black eyes snap with intelligence as she speaks—and she speaks just now of little else than Carlton.

"Fred gave me watches and rings, but the police have them all. They've no right to them, either, he says, and my law yer is trying to get them back."

Mrs. Vandeventer was wearing the blue "suspender" suit she had on in court when held for special sessions on the complaint of Anthony Comstock.

She talks well, uses fair English, more or less idiomatic, and is extremely theatrical. She enjoys the notoriety she has gained, but is really worried about the present position of her strange sweetheart.

"Fred kill me?" she exclaimed. "What, Fred? Hats. Why, Fred and I loved each other truly and we were to be married."

"He married others," was suggested.

"And what do I care?" she snapped. "Suppose he married a hundred. He loved me and I loved him. That's enough, ain't it?"

"But the police say some of these women are still living."

"I don't think Fred would ask me to marry him if that were so," said Mrs. Vandeventer.

Gave Her Nice Things.

"Why, from the beginning Fred was simply great. He gave me all sorts of pretty things. Talk about your sweethearts. He was a prince. Look at the things Inspector Cross took from me. Look at that mantilla shawl. Look at that watch and the other jewelry. Belonged to his other wives? Well, they were his, weren't they?

"His eyes are all right, but don't you believe in those hypnotism stories. Fred may be able to hypnotize, but he didn't hypnotize me. He simply was nice, out and out. He beats any man I ever met everyway. We are going to be married just as soon as he is released."

"Inspector Cross says he can send Carlton away for about fifty years," was suggested.

Mrs. Vandeventer's jaw dropped a little then snapped.

"Well, then, I want the same term," she said.

"His medicine? Why, I've taken it. Yes, and I'll take it again by the gallon, and with a thousand insurance policies on my life. I had a sore on my arm. Fred cured it. That's all I know about his medicine, and that's good testimony, ain't it?"

GIRL'S DEATH BY DROWNING IS A MYSTERY

Asked Companion if He Would Save Her and Leaped From Boat.

MADE STRANGE REMARKS

SPRINGFIELD, Aug. 4.—The police and friends of Miss Della Simons, eighteen years old, of Holyoke, are trying to ascertain whether the young woman committed suicide or was accidentally drowned in the Connecticut river here.

Miss Simons came to Springfield with her chum, Miss Catherine Steiger of No. 11 Pine street, Holyoke, in company with William Fairing and Cecil Spalding, of this city they went boating on the river. Near the South End bridge Miss Simons fell or jumped overboard and was drowned. The drowning occurred late at night and the body was recovered by the police soon after daylight.

Before leaving home last evening Miss Simons said to her mother:

"It will be the last time you will have to fasten this dress."

On the way to Springfield she handed her ring and pocketbook to Miss Steiger with the remark:

"Keep it for me. I may never want it again."

Miss Simons and Fairing were in one boat and Miss Steiger and Spalding in another. Miss Simons said to Fairing:

"If I jumped overboard would you rescue me?"

Fairing, supposing the remark to be made in fun, replied in the affirmative. Suddenly there was a splash, and Miss Simons had disappeared.

Fairing caught sight of her sinking form and plunged into the river after her. His efforts were unsuccessful and the party notified the police of the occurrence.

DR. SHOOP

LUTHER BURBANK, THE WIZARD OF PLANT LIFE, WILL RAISE BABIES, AS HE RAISES FLOWERS, SCIENTIFICALLY

Man Who by Careful Breeding Has Created New Fruits and Blossoms, Will Apply the Same Principles to Child Culture.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4.—Luther Burbank, the wonder worker of plant life, whose methods of culture have enabled him to produce new fruits and vegetables, new flowers and plants—new in the sense of never having existed before—now plans a great work for humanity which has the same idea for a foundation. It will be practically baby-culture; the raising of children along those lines of infinite care which he has given to growing plants.

To the Rev. Dr. James W. Lee, pastor of St. John's Southern Methodist Church of St. Louis, Mr. Burbank outlined his ideas, his ambition. Briefly this ambition is to raise children scientifically: to make them, as Mr. Burbank says, physically, morally and spiritually perfect. He sees nothing impossible in this. With care he has produced perfect plant life; he sees no obstacle in the way of perfect human life.

This, from a man who has accomplished seeming miracles in a vocation wherein he has stood alone, has aroused wide interest. Mr. Burbank is known most widely as the creator of a new potato. It is neither a sweet nor a white potato. It is a new potato. He produced also one fruit which none can name. It is distinctive. Only recently, on the eve of Miss Alice Roosevelt's departure for the Far East he presented to her a bunch of orchids like none ever known in the world before.

Outlines His Plans.

These are the things for which Mr. Burbank is most widely known. He has devoted his life to them. In outlining his plans for the care of children he referred to Thomas J. Barnado of London, who has within the last few years educated some 60,000 waifs in the ninety-three homes he has made for them in England, with the result that only two per cent. of them have turned out bad. Mr. Burbank wants to do the same thing here.

Mr. Burbank declared that plants, weeds and trees were responsive to a few influences in their environment, but that children were infinitely more responsive, and the failure to recognize the spiritual elements in the environing conditions of children had been the fatal lack in dealing with them.

Mr. Burbank has studied Barnardo's method of rearing waifs and declares Barnardo is doing in the realm of human life what he was doing in the realm of plant life.

"Barnardo," he continued, "has demonstrated that infinitely more can be done with children than with weeds and plants. Whenever human beings recognize these realities in the realms of human life and begin to apply scientific principles to the training of children, then humanity will enter upon a new stage of existence."

Mr. Burbank said that in his opinion every person should be physically, morally and spiritually perfect, and could be if the same attention were paid to his or her training that he was giving to weeds.

Seeming Miracles.

He declared that, just as he had wrought seeming miracles with plants by bringing them into contact with those elements of their environment to which they rapidly responded, those who have the care of children should seek to do for them and to train them by bringing their natures into relation with all the elements of their environment to which they are potentially responsive.

The foundation of Mr. Burbank's success with plant life has been crossing various growing things. But there the work had only begun. Men who have studied this crossing or grafting have all that one will produce several species. From this point onward Mr. Burbank has accomplished his greatest work. It is in selection and environment of growing plants.

Thus Mr. Burbank feels that he can take children from orphan asylums and from other homes which have been provided for them and give them the necessary environment to make them what they should be, physically and morally perfect. All these things he told to Dr. Lee. What will be the outcome of the project no one as yet can say. Mr. Burbank declares that he is willing to undertake it, and may do so.

HOPES TO PERFECT MEN BY BABY CULTURE.

The three small pictures show the California miracle-worker and two examples of his marvelous accomplishments. The diagram indicates the careful study by which he would make human life perfect.

DR. BODFISH SAYS BURBANK IS RIGHT

Dr. Gertrude Bodfish, of Massachusetts avenue, the president of the Ladies' Physiological Institute and a physician of much skill, heartily indorses Mr. Burbank's views on child culture.

"They are so identical with my own ideas that it seems almost as though I must have said the very words which are quoted from Mr. Burbank's interview," she said, when asked an opinion regarding the plan for bettering the world by carefully reared children.

"Do I believe in it?" she continued, "most sincerely and emphatically.

"It is a subject which I have been studying and talking about for years, and I only hope that Mr. Burbank will do for the human race as much as he has done for flowers and vegetables.

"Why, the only way that the human race can ultimately be improved is by carefully reared children; yes, call them scientifically cultured if you choose.

"We are rearing criminals now just as fast as we can.

Rearing Criminals.

"Yes we are. How? Go down into the crowded sections of the city and see what lives the children of the masses are living and then ask me how.

"The children are running wild in the streets, absorbing all that is vicious and vile and bad.

"A perfect marriage is the beginning of nothing to keep them busy or make them happy.

"Even the food they eat is not the best that they should have.

"I believe a great deal in heredity, but I believe more in environment. I believe that good rearing can largely nullify the effects of bad birth.

"Take the poorest child and give it the proper training and you can make a good child of it.

"If you keep children busy and happy they are pretty sure to be healthy, and busy, happy, healthy children are pretty sure to make good citizens.

"A child needs a home life to make him happy. He needs to be kept busy. If he is unhappy and idle he is almost certain to take a downward trend.

"I would not be understood as putting too light an estimate on the influence of heredity.

Would Restrict Marriage.

"We cannot have perfect children, mentally, physically and morally, until we do something to restrict marriage.

"A perfect marriage is the beginning of perfect children.

"The best children are those of perfectly mated parents.

"Unhappy, vicious, unhealthy parents give their children a heritage which is difficult to overcome. A birth environment will do a great deal, even for those children.

"I would have city nurseries where tiny babies, whose parents are not so situated that they can care for them properly, can be scientifically cared for from the moment of birth and I would have more playgrounds, to keep the children out of the streets and away from vicious surroundings and close to nature.

"If Mr. Burbank can solve the problem of raising perfect children he will be the greatest benefactor of the age. It is one of the gravest problems we have to face."

WOMAN BEAT ARMY OFFICERS IN BEER BOUT

Drank Whiskey Straight, and Her Husband, Maj. Taggart, Now Seeks Divorce.

SAYS SHE DECEIVED HIM.

WOOSTER, O., Aug. 4.—That Grace Viola Taggart, wife of Major Taggart, drank whisky straight when seasoned army officers in her company had to dilute theirs with water and that she entered into a beer drinking bout with another woman a heavy favorite in the betting, were some of the things brought out at the hearing of the suit for divorce brought by the husband that is now on trial here.

Another feature of the case, according to the major, is that his wife deceived him as to her antecedents. He asserts that she made him believe that her father was Charles Culver, the rich Chicago Board of Trade operator. Instead, the Major avers, her father is John Mauville, a hotel porter, whom his wife usually referred to as "uncle John."

Howard Taggart of Baltimore, brother of the major, was a witness.

"I lived with my brother at Fort Thomas from 1893 until 1896," said Howard Taggart. "I know Lieutenant Rayther. I often saw him at my brother's house. One night when my brother was at the Fort Thomas rifle range for two weeks I retired early. I was up several times in the night. At 1:30 o'clock I saw a light burning in the front hall. I was at the head of the stairs. Lieutenant Rayther opened the door, without knocking, and tiptoed into the parlor. I waited five or 10 minutes and then went downstairs.

"When I got to the dining room I heard some one leave the parlor. I hurried to the door and saw Lieutenant Rayther tiptoe out of the parlor toward the front door. To my knowledge Lieutenant Rayther did not call at the house after that.

"I told Major Taggart of this only after the suit for divorce was begun.

"When officers called at the house Major Taggart would offer them liquors and cigars and Mrs. Taggart would drink with them. Mrs. Taggart drank whiskey straight and prided herself because of it. She laughed at officers who drank water with theirs.

"Mrs. Taggart and the wife of another officer had a beer drinking contest at the canteen set aside for officers and their wives. One of the officers wagered Mrs. Taggart could drink the most beer. Another officer backed the other. I left before the contest was over.

Gave Beer to Boy.

Major Taggart often remonstrated with his wife for giving beer to their eldest boy. I did not drink at the time, but one day Mrs. Taggart mixed me what I thought was lemonade, and asked if made me so drunk I had to go to bed.

"One day I noticed a cut on Mrs. Taggart's forehead," said Mr. Taggart, speaking of incidents when in Matanzas, Cuba. "She wore her hair down over her eye, concealing the cut. She told me that was a new style. I told the other women I had heard Mrs. Taggart got cut while drinking with two volunteer officers. She said they met the officers on the plaza and went to a saloon. They drank 'high balls' at first. Then one officer ordered champagne.

"They had filled their glasses and were standing when Major Taggart appeared in the doorway. One of the officers waved his glass and cried: 'Hello, Tagg; here's how.' Major Taggart knocked the glass from his hand and the officer fell, so drunk he could not get up. It was when Mrs. Taggart returned home she fell against a dresser and cut her head.

Told of Poker Games.

The witness told of poker games among the officers, but said Major Taggart did not play much.

"There was one game at the club when Major Taggart played," he said. "There were bottles of liquor on the table, and a minister was shoved into the room as a joke."

Cross-examined on the subject of the drinking contest at the officers' canteen, the witness said one of the officers there, when he and Mrs. Taggart entered, was Dr. Brooks. He thought the others were Lieutenants Simmons and Purdy.

12 INJURED IN WRECK; POLICE INVESTIGATING

NORTH ATTLEBORO, Aug. 4.—Investigation is being made to-day of the cause of the head-on collision between two cars on the Interstate Consolidated Road at Walnut Grove by officials of the road and representatives of the Railroad Commissioners. Twelve persons were hurt, none fatally, according to reports from their homes to-day. The injured:

CANNON, MRS. BERNARD, North Attleboro, ankle broken.

BARBER, MRS. FRED, North Attleboro, internally injured.

SLADE, HERBERT L., Chelsea, face lacerated.

MONROE, MOTERMAN ARTHUR, Warren, R. I., both ankles crushed.

MURRAY, RICHARD, North Attleboro, hip and arm injured.

KLEIN, MISS SUSIE, North Attleboro, shoulders lacerated.

KIRKE, MISS ANNIE, North Attleboro, hips and arms bruised.

MOULTON, MRS. ELLEN, Providence, nose broken.

CONDON, CONDUCTOR HIRAM, Attleboro, arms and hands bruised.

CURTIS, MRS. OWEN, North Attleboro, severe bruises about the body.

LAFONTAINE, CYRIL, North Attleboro, arms and legs injured.

BROWN, MRS. OTO F., North Attleboro, arms bruised.

BROWAN, MRS. JAMES, North Attleboro, bruised slightly.

It is believed that the collision was due to a mistake in the signals. One car was from North Attleboro for Walnut Grove and was heavily loaded. It was in charge of Motorman Isaac Gilbden and Conductor Hiram Congdon. The other car was from Pawtucket in charge of Motorman Hutchinson. Gilbden saw the other car first and brought his to a stop.

ISIDOR WORMSER HAD APPENDICITIS

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Isidor Wormser, the New York banker, has been operated on for appendicitis and is lying at the United States Hotel in a critical condition. The operation was performed by Drs. McBurney and Campbell of New York, assisted by two local physicians, Drs. Comstock and May.

MALDEN WEDDING CROWNS ROMANCE BEGUN IN ENGLAND

MRS. FREDERICK KENYON, THE BRIDE.

Long Separated, Frederick Kenyon and Jennie Lord Lived as Children in Old Country.

A romance of childhood in England many years ago has culminated to the wedding at Malden of pretty Miss Jennie Lord and Frederick Kenyon of Taunton. As children they loved in old England, as a boy he came here and later Miss Kenyon and her father followed. Now comes the wedding. It was a simple but beautiful ceremony at the bride's home, No. 30 Auburn street, Malden.

While still a boy Kenyon came to this country, leaving behind him the little girl he had long loved, with a promise that some day he would make her his wife. For years he remained here, but kept in constant correspondence with Miss Lord. His glowing stories of the life here aroused the enthusiasm, not only of Miss Lord, but her father, to whom she often read extracts from Kenyon's letters.

So a few years ago Mr. Lord and his family emigrated to America and went to Malden to live, where they became very popular and made many friends. Kenyon was at the dock to meet them when they landed from the steamer, but instead of finding the little girl whom he remembered in England, he found she had grown into beautiful womanhood.

Miss Lord is the daughter of George Lord, who is well known as a printer in Boston. She was gowned in white India silk, trimmed with Duchess lace. She was attended by her sister, Miss Mary Lord. John O. Lord, a brother of the bride, was best man. After returning from a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Kenyon will live in Taunton.

GIRL SEEKS LOST FATHER

Wealthy Stamp Collector Mysteriously Disappears on Visit to Boston.

Miss Mabel C. Gifford has begun a personal search for some trace of her father, T. Merritt Gifford, a wealthy resident of New Bedford and one of the best-known stamp collectors in the United States, who has called on the Boston police for aid. Six days ago he left his home to come to this city. His friends believe he never reached here, but if he did he immediately disappeared from the knowledge of family and acquaintances.

He did not keep an engagement with J. Frank Brown, a stamp dealer at No. 339 Washington street. Mr. Brown expected to consummate a deal involving considerable money and the exchange of valuable stamps. It was understood by his family that he intended to stop at Nantasket Beach on the way to Boston. A gateman at Paragon Park says that he visited that resort. That is the last trace of him discovered.

Mrs. Gifford is prostrated by anxiety due to her husband's inexplicable absence.

Mr. Gifford is sixty-two years old, slender, of medium height, light complexion, and has a full, sandy beard. He is slightly lame. He is supposed to have had a large sum of money with him when he left New Bedford, having been commissioned by Charles Folger to obtain some very rare stamps. He was of good habits and an extensive traveler. His friends fear he is the victim of foul play.

EDISON'S NEW AUTO BATTERY

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—In announcing that he had perfected his storage batteries for propelling electric vehicles, Thomas A. Edison warmly complimented young Cooper Hewitt, who had helped him solve a most difficult problem with his mercury rectifier.

Mr. Edison announced that in a few weeks he will start work on a new factory, three stories high, 600 feet long and 60 feet wide, on Lakeside avenue, Orange, N. J., for the manufacture of cells on a large scale for the trade.

The cells, as now perfected, will drive a two-ton truck at the rate of thirty-three miles an hour, with half the weight of the old method.

THINK BELCHER IS IN MOUNTAINS

Fugitive Paterson Mayor Who Robbed Friends and Poor Has Ideal Hiding Place.

Special to the Boston American.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 4.—William E. Belcher, the fugitive reform Mayor of Paterson, now known to have been a plunderer of the poor, and to have robbed his friends and financial institutions to the extent of more than $100,000, is believed to be hiding in the vicinity of his almost inaccessible mountain home five miles from Midvale station.

No warrant has been issued for Belcher's arrest and no search for him has been made by the police. In view of the bitter feeling against him which has developed throughout the city since the nature of his great and petty swindles became known, it is thought likely a formal complaint will be made against him on which an order for his arrest may be based. Meanwhile the theory that he committed suicide has been abandoned, and it is the general belief that he is a fugitive.

His mountain home is an ideal hiding place surrounded by natural fortifications equal to those of a Kentucky moonshiner's still and cabin. No more ideal hiding place could be found and if the wild country surrounding his home he might remain concealed almost indefinitely.

MARY ROGERS'S CASE IN SUPREME COURT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—The record in the case of Mrs. Mary M. Rogers, under sentence of death at Windsor, Vt., for the murder of her husband, has been entered by the clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States. The case is brought on by plea that the woman is insane.

IS NO POISON NOW IN BOTTLE WATERMAN HAD

Chemist Finds No Traces; Is Said Accused Rinsed It After Lilla Drank.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Aug. 4.—Although the analysis of the stomach of Lilla Waterman, suspected of having been poisoned by her father, Robert Waterman, has not yet been completed, the bottle which it is claimed contained the poison has been examined and found to contain nothing incriminating. It is declared, however, that Waterman rinsed the bottle out after giving Lilla some of its contents, and then gave it to the surviving child to play with.

It has been decided to hold the preliminary hearing of Robert Waterman at Gallups Mills on Thursday. Professor White's examination of the dead child's organs will then be completed.

Careful search at St. Johnsbury has brought to light nothing to show that Waterman purchased poison in that city. It has been learned, however, that once, while he was drunk, about three years ago, he was arrested on complaint of Mrs. Pooler and at that time vowed he would some time "get even with her." Since then there has always been bad blood between them.

It is now declared that the bodies of Waterman's wives and children will not be exhumed unless the State's chemist reports that Lilla did die of poisoning if he can be convicted of causing her death, the State will not go to the expense of attempting to prove the others.

SAYS HE WOULD NOT HAVE KILLED WIFE IF HIS HEAD HAD BEEN RIGHT

TIEDMAN AND WIFE HE IS ALLEGED TO HAVE SHOT.

Charles Tiedman Declares He Has No Relatives—May Plan Insanity Defence.

SPRINGFIELD, Aug. 4.—Charles Tiedman, who is in Hampden County jail, charged with the murder of his wife, Bessie Tiedman, in Chester on Tuesday, is apparently without a friend or relative in the world.

When asked if he wished to have his relatives notified, he answered: "I haven't any relations." Even his dead wife's father, Frank Austin, knows little about his son-in-law.

Tiedman landed in Chester about two years ago apparently from nowhere. He worked as a brakeman at odd times for the New York Central road, and finally secured steady employment.

He soon began paying his attentions to pretty Bessie Austin, and in a short time they were married, much against her father's wishes.

Tiedman then quit work and a year ago Mr. Austin ordered him from the house. Since then he has only been in Chester occasionally, but on each occasion has made threats against his wife and her relatives.

It is said here that Tiedman will plead insanity when his trial comes in September. He sold to Chief of Police Cash of Westfield, who took him to jail: "I wouldn't have done it if my head had been right."

Mrs. Carrie Adams of No. 19 Cambridge street, this city, aunt of the dead girl, who is the only person who saw the shooting, returned to Chester last night to look after the household and arrange for the funeral of the dead girl.

She did all she could to protect Bessie from the infuriated murderer. She saw him coming and rushing to the door locked it just in time to prevent him from entering.

After shooting Bessie through the window Tiedman tried to kill Mrs. Adams, but she ran upstairs and escaped with her life.

"Bessie should never have married him," said Mrs. Adams. "The poor girl was always frightened of her life when he was around and a week ago I went to Chester to help protect her, but to no purpose.

Tiedman as yet has expressed no sorrow because of his act. He only regrets that while he was about it he did not make way with Mrs. Adams and also with Maude Palmer, the girl's chum.

AWAIT PERMIT TO ENTER U. S.

Despite assurances from Washington that permission has been granted to the border line between the United States and Canada has been sent to the British Ambassador for the forty-third Duke of Cornwall's two sons who is to visit Boston on the morrow, a report from ottawa declares that this permission has not been received, and until it is received the regiment can not start.

None of the officers of the British Naval and Military Veterans' Association in Boston, who are to entertain the Canadians, know anything about this matter as it has been conducted by the state departments of the two countries. The belief, however, that it will be satisfactorily straightened out. The British Ambassador, Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, to whom the permission was sent, is supposed to be at his Summer home in Lenox.

The Canadian regiment is scheduled to leave Ottawa at 5 o'clock to-day and to reach Boston at 8:30 o'clock to-morrow. The rank and file will be taken across the city to the South Station by the Elevated road, en route to Providence and will return to Boston that evening.

On Sunday they will attend religious services at Trinity church, escorted by the British Naval and Military Veterans' Association to the staff of Colonel Court Leroy Sturgis and will be received by the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, the Amoskeag Veterans, National Lancers, Colonel Kincaid of the staff of Governor Douglas, officers of the State militia and other military organizations. The officers of the Canadian regiment will be entertained at the Copley Square Hotel, while the men will be put up in the Fifth Regiment armory on Irvington street.

CREW PRAISED BY PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.— President Roosevelt has expressed to Captain Richard Clover, commanding the battleship Wisconsin, his satisfaction with the recent exhibition of target shooting by the forward turret crew of his vessel, who beat the world's record with the 13-inch guns. This is what the president sent my hearty congratulations to the gun crew and now how proud and pleased I am of the record they have made. The navy of the United States should be close to the heart of every citizen of the United States, and in assuch as the honor of the nation may at any time depend upon the way in which the big guns are handled, I know the very keenest interest in all that pertains to the care and marksmanship. With hearty congratulations, believe me sincerely yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

WOMAN FIGHTS UGLY BULLDOG

Miss Mary Kelly of No. 393 Massachusetts avenue is suffering from a severe dog bite on her left arm, coupled with nervous shock and fright, received in trying to save her pet Japanese spaniel, Kin Twin, from an attack by a bulldog. Miss Kelly lifted the pet Jap up in her arms when the bulldog rushed at the little fellow. The bull jumped at Kin Twin, bit him in the back, was beaten off by some men, jumped again, this time at Miss Kelly, caught her arm and knocked her down. Growling savagely, the infuriated bulldog was finally chased off for good. Miss Kelly was attended by a physician, and the dog of the Japanese dog which tried to protect was sent to Dr. Frost, the veterinary.

Miss Kelly and Kin Twin are in front of her own house when the bull came prowling around. The bulldog, totally unfit for a scrap, was going about in the grass at the end of his leash, when the bull made a rush.

Dr. Edward Gleason attended Miss Kelly. To-day she is suffering severely from nervous shock.

SCIENTIST, ILL, DEFIES DOCTORS

Special to the Boston American.

PITTSFIELD, Aug. 4.—Thomas Kent, a wealthy Christian Scientist, is believed to be dying of pneumonia at his home in Terryville, and refuses to have a physician or to take medicine. He became ill last Friday. He grew steadily worse and his family insisted upon calling Dr. Welling on, but Kent ordered him out of the room. Kent tolerates a nurse who has tried by various devices to get him to take medicine, but, suspecting her purpose, he now refuses to eat. He declares that if he does not get well it will be because he lacks a proper degree of faith. Kent is fifty years old.

FISH CITY BONIFACE WEDS IN PROVIDENCE

GLOUCESTER, Aug. 4—Peter McDonald, proprietor of the Boston House on Rogers street, was married at Providence, R. I., to Miss Grace Rector, also of this city.

Mr. Mcdonald three years ago went into the saloon business. He is well known as a sporting man in Boston and other places. Very little is known here of the bride, except that she came from Annapolis Valley, N. S., Canada, about two years ago, and was for a time employed as a waitress in a cafe in Boston.

DINNEEN CARDED AGAINST INDIANS

Champs Have Won Seven Out of the Last Nine Games Played.

Umpires—Connolly.

With three straight victories to their credit, the Boston Champions will go after the Clevelands again to-day, bent upon avenging for the walloping the Indians gave them in the Forest City.

Collins and his band are anxious to atone for their sins by taking five straight from the Indians. Two have already been garnered from the visitors. Last Friday the decision of the postponed games went to the locals, while yesterday another contest was spoil for the Champs.

The Bostons are playing some good live games these days, no mistake. They have won seven out of the last nine games, and if they are able to maintain any where near this percentage they will be one of the contestants in the final struggle for the championship.

Tigers Getting Their Bumps.

Did you notice how the Tigers are getting their bumps? They lost three out of four to the Champs. Then the Senators took them to task and won all four games. Yesterday the Athletics took them in hand and won a close game.

By the defeat of the Tigers yesterday, the Bostons passed Bill Armour's team in the race. The Champs are now but a few points behind the New Yorks, and if the Champs should win to-day, while the Highlanders lose, the two teams will be on the St. Louis tried hard to whip the New Yorkers yesterday, and were beaten out after eleven innings of fast ball playing. Cleveland is not a very difficult proposition to solve these days. They have lost nine out of the last ten games, and are likely to lose many more in Boston and Philadelphia.

The Indians can be pardoned for their stump, as many of their star players are out of the game. For instance, Addie Joss, their star twiler, who has won a majority of their games, is out. The elongated Indian pitcher was in uniform for the first time in two weeks yesterday. He may be able to pitch one of the games here.

Harry Bay, the fleet footed centerfielder wrenched his knee in this city and is not down on the batting order. Second-Baseman Kahl is another one on the injured list. Lajoie and Stovall, are two more Cleveland lights that are not able to play.

By hit way of rubbing it in, Al Selbach smashed a hard liner to Bill Bernhard yesterday, and the latter was obliged to retire with a bruised thumb.

The Bostons have caught the Naps napping all right, and they should win at least two of the remaining games. Even if the Indians had all their big warriors in the line-up, the Champs would be able to make trouble for them, as they are now playing glit-edged ball.

Bill Dinneen, who had a bad session last Saturday against the Browns, is carded to pitch to-day, and the big fellow assures us that he is right in a jolly mood to scalp the Indians. Norwood Gibson is a second choice.

Bernhardt May Pitch.

If Bernhardt's thumb is all right, he will pitch to-day. Otherwise, Cy Ferry, just released by Montreal, or Red Donahue will do the pleasing up.

Jesse Tannehill improved his record yesterday by winning from the Naps in easy fashion. He allowed but three hits, two of them being made by Flick and the other by Buelow, who batted for Hess in the ninth.

The Bostons bunched their hits in the second, and scored four runs.

The feature of the game was the all-around good work of the battery, Tannehill and Criger, who not only did good work on the field, but batted ahead as well.

BOB WICKER WILL FACE TENNEYITES

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—Vic Willis will pitch for the Bostons to-day, and Bob Wicker is carded by the Colts.

Rain prevented the two teams from lining up yesterday.

The Boston won the first game here, with Young doing the honors, and they hope to win to-day, as Willis is in first-rate form.

On the other hand, Wicker is in great shape, and as he is regarded the most consistent winning pitcher of the locals at present, he should make the going hard for the Bostonters.

There may be a double-header here to-morrow. There is an open date during the next visit of the Bostons, and yesterday's postponed game may be worked off then.

The Chicago players are having a strenuous time in trying to explain the losing streak which has struck them. The general opinion here seems to be that Frank Chance is not capable of filling the managerial shoes left vacant by Selee's illness, which was responsible for his asking for a leave of absence for the balance of the year.

The Cubs have been playing poor ball lately. With Selee off the bench the players have lost all their ginger. The men have been loafing on Chance, failing to back up bases on throws and showing a signal lack of enthusiasm by not running for hits which look to be outs.

Chance denies that the players are shirking, and says that the team is merely in a slump, which comes to any team, and that it will be going again full tilt and before the Boston series is over.

FAST RUNNERS MET IN THE HANDICAP FEATURE

NARRAGANSETT PARK RACE TRACK, Aug. 4.—With a track lightning fast and the thoroughbreds making the most of the last two days of the Narragansett Breeders' meeting, some of the best racing materialized on the card today.

Good substantial fields helped to increase the uncertainty of the probable winners, and the favorites were a little shy on strength as the contenders were more classy than ever and honors were generally shared in every event.

The influx of track followers was noticeably greater than at any time during the week, and the usual rush of the closing days was apparent by the increased throng that came through the turnstiles.

The runners were well known from their sojurn at the track and their qualities were freely commented on whenever they appeared, and the record holders got the largest consideration.

The favorites had done so well by their followers that they were eagerly sought for and they stood up strongly in the finer grade of fields that are now prevailing.

The tone of the entries in each event held the suspense at greater pitch and the big form of the steeds was seen in the close finishes that were the usual thing.

In place of the stake race, the handicap for three year-olds and up, at a mile and a quarter, was the feature, and the best the stable afforded were seen at the post.

Mr. Richards, with his Boston stable, was well represented by New York, Ostrich and Painte, and any one of them was strong for the distance.

Ostrich was the pick of the trio and was in at a good weight.

There was little choice in the first race for two-year-olds, with Merlings, Sufficiency and Pater facing the barrier. It was blind stabbing for a winner.

FAST NINES TO MEET.

The Houghton & Dutton baseball team and the fast Oilcloths nine will cross bats at Franklin field to-morrow on No. 12 diamond. Both teams are very fast, neither having lost a game. A large crowd of rooters is expected to attend. The game will be called sharp at 3 o'clock.

DAVY JONES FOR SENATORS

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 4.—Davy Jones, who covered centre field for the Chicago National League club two years and was released to Minneapolis last Spring, will in all probability play with Washington of the American League next season, an agreement to that effect is said to have been reached some time ago between Manager Stahl and Owner Watkins.

BLACKLIST FOR BALL PLAYERS

CINCINNATI, Aug. 4.—The National baseball commission decided that players who wilfully break their agreements with clubs that enter into contracts with them in good faith shall be permanently blacklisted.

Narragansett Races.

Complete results of the races at Narragansett Park will be found in the "P. M. and Baseball" Edition of the BOSTON AMERICAN every night.

CAN A MAN WIN A WIFE IF HE TELLS THE TRUTH?

DOROTHY DIX Is of the Opinion That Strictest Veracity Is Not Always Expected When It Comes to the Game of Lovemaking

By Dorothy Dix

A CORRESPONDENT of the male persuasion asks me the following questions:

"Could a man win a girl's love if he did not jolly her? If he were to be absolutely sincere, and weigh every word, would he have any chance at all of captivating her affections?"

A strict regard for the facts in the case compels me to answer "No." He would not have the ghost of a show. Veracious Romeo would never make a hit with Juliet. No girl in this world ever did, or ever will, risk getting a cold in her head leaning over a balcony in the night air to hear a man tell her the truth about herself.

It is for this reason that when a man is in love he lets go his grip on veracity, and the Recording Angel shuts its eyes and stuffs its ears with cotton. It is a case of the ox in the ditch, of the necessity of the moment.

It is every woman's right, at least once in her life, to be told that she is as beautiful as Venus, as graceful as a fawn, as fascinating as Circe, and that she has hands like a lily and feet like Cinderella.

Some Big Lies

OF course every man who goes a-wooing swears on his heart that every word he says is true, and when the girl feebly protests that she fears he exaggerates her charms, he makes Bible oath that he is not saying a word more than he believes, and that he knows her to be the most beautiful, the most charming and the most angelic being on earth.

This is the biggest lie of all, but it never occurs to the flattered maiden to doubt it, and so all goes merry as a marriage bell.

These falsehoods—which surely are scored up to man for virtue—are condoned by the exigencies of the situation, for if a lover were to be perfectly frank and honest with his inamorata, and weigh every word to see if he meant it, and test every compliment to ascertain if it was deserved, there would be nothing doing in the matrimonial line.

At the first word of truth the conscientious suitor would be sent about his business, and it would be the Home for Aged and Discarded Bachelors for his.

And the Truth

EDWIN falls in love with Angelina, and wants to marry her, but he knows better than to go to her and say:

"My dear Angelina, I love you, and I want to marry you, in spite of the fact that you have a wretched complexion, hay-colored hair, a bad figure and no taste in dress.

"I have also noticed you around home, and perceive that you are inclined to be slovenly and indolent, and that you have a quick temper, and while I realize that I am taking a pretty big risk in marrying a woman with such serious faults, still I believe that with a husband who would be kind and affectionate to you and yet hold a tight hand over you, you could be formed into an admirable wife, and I've got the grit to go up against the game and take the chances."

That is what thousands and tens of thousands of men are really thinking in the inmost recesses of their hearts when they pop the question, but just suppose one of them had the foolhardiness to say it to a woman.

Wh-o-e-ew!

What would Angelina say and do, thus confronted by the cold, hard, unpalatable truth?

At the first word she would stiffen up. At the second she would withdraw her hand from Edwin's. At the third inclination that she was not perfect she would begin to congeal. At the fourth she would diffuse an atmosphere of chilliness that would make the North Pole seem like a balmy Winter resort.

At the fifth she would call for help, and by the time Edwin had finished his veracious proposal he would find himself outside of the house with the storm doors shut tight between them.

A Real Instance

VALUABLE—nay, indispensable everywhere else in life—truth is at a discount in love-making, as witness the following incident, for which I personally vouch:

A man, no longer very young, who prided himself upon his strict veracity, fell in love with a woman also past her first youth, and who, while plain of face and figure, was most attractive because of her intelligence, and good humor, and amiable disposition.

The man was really very much in love and desired to marry her, and he proposed to her three times. The first time he told her that, of course, they were too old to be romantically in love, he highly esteemed her, and if she would marry him he would do his best to make her happy. To this she returned an indignant and emphatic "No."

The second time he asked her to marry him, he told her that the fact of her being homely and middle-aged made no difference to him, as he loved her for her heart and good qualities, and again she refused him with vigor and decision.

The third time he threw truth to the winds, and swore to her that he would commit suicide if she did not take pity on him, and marry him, and that to him she was the most beautiful creature on earth, and the next day she accompanied him to the parson's.

Veracity has no place in love-making. Women hear enough home truths from their husbands, and so they wisely feel that they can dispense with them from their sweethearts.

Sugar-coated deception wins over the bitter truth every time.

Hints on Health and Beauty

By the Professor

DEAR PROFESSOR:

On my upper lip I have a slight growth of hair, which, being dark, shows quite plainly, and is therefore quite annoying. If you tell me of some simple way of getting rid of this blemish I would be very grateful to you.

SARAH R. W.

WHEN the growth of superfluous hair is very apparent, as in your case, there is no doubt about its being very annoying, even mortifying; but it is natural for women to have more or less hair on the upper lip, and I find that they usually exaggerate it as a blemish. Those hairs may look as big as twine to a sensitive woman gazing at her face in a mirror, and yet never be noticed even by her most ardent male admirer.

The only really effectual remedy for superfluous hair is electrolysis, as that treatment destroys the hair papillae. The electric operation as performed nowadays with perfected apparatus is absolutely painless and should leave not the slightest scar. None but an expert should do the work, though.

If you prefer to try a home treatment a good depilatory is made of three ounces of sulphuret of barium and twelve ounces of water, mixed into a paste by wetting cornstarch with the solution, and applying to the hairs. When dry the hairs should come away with it.

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I have a peculiar little red spot under the skin of my nose which shows very plainly. It is shaped like an animal with long legs. Can you tell me how to remove it?

BERTHA.

ELECTRICITY, skilfully applied by an expert, is really the safest and most effective remedy for such a discoloration, which is commonly called a "spider spot." It must be treated according to its specific character.

If it is only a slight blemish, however, the daily use of the following lotion will blanch and perhaps entirely cure it:

Bitter almonds	3 drams
Bichloride of mercury (coarse powder)	15 grains
Jordan almonds (blanched)	1 ounce
Distilled water	1 pint

With half the water make the almonds into an emulsion, strain it and gradually add the mercury previously dissolved in the other half of the water. When finished add enough water to make it measure exactly one pint. As this lotion is poisonous, be sure to keep it out of the reach of children.

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I am a victim of superfluous hair. I have tried one fairly mild remedy that was recommended to me, but without results. I wish you would tell me of some strong remedy that would be apt to do the desired work.

ALICE B.

SINCE you say that a fairly mild remedy had no effect, I am going to give you the formula for a "heroic" remedy, but I want to caution all other girl readers who have never tried anything for superfluous hair not to use the remedy I recommend in your case. It follows:

Sulphuret of barium	½ ounce
Distilled water	4 ounces

Enough refined chalk to make into a paste.

Make this paste off as soon after applying as the flesh feels irritated. If the flesh smarts at all apply a little ointment. You had better have some of this on hand to apply immediately in such an emergency. Repeat the application of the paste if necessary. The hair should come off with the paste.

"RIGHT," said George. "You're worth more than all the great ladies in the country, and much too good for me."

"No, no, George!" she commenced; but he kissed the words away and would not let her speak.

"You are just coming right away back to the home, my girl," said George, "and I'm going to have a few very forcible words with my friend Mr. Blenheim. I've had enough of this. Old Blenheim may do what he likes about the estate, and all the rest of it, and I suppose he knows best; but I won't have him meddling with my private affairs. I've told him so once, and I'll tell him so again, too, in a jolly sight stronger language."

Which he did.

Thus did Mr. Blenheim's plans ignominiously fail. He had the sense to see that as good would possibly come of further pursuing his opposition at present and under existing circumstances.

"Get him away out of the country, and away from all these terrible people," he said to Vaughan. "Show him the world—the great world, of which at present he knows nothing. Make him associate with people; throw him in the way of women—beautiful women, who will flatter him, and make him conceited."

"In other words," interrupted Vaughan, "you just got to do my level best to thaw ought's cold heart—eh?"

"I suppose that is about it," said Mr. Blenheim.

So they started off after considerable persuasion—George and the latter and keeper, Vaughan.

There were affectionate leavetakings between Mrs. Holland and George, and George and Bella.

"I shan't be away long, mother," said George. "A month or two at most."

Vaughan was determined that it should be six months at least, if he had anything to say or do in the matter. A shorter period would be useless.

"Take care of Bella while I'm away," said George. "I shall write to you both every day."

But Vaughan foresaw the time in the very near future when George would consider it too much of a tax on his valuable time to write letters to Bella, or anyone else, for the matter of that, every day.

They went straight to Paris. George had never been to Paris before in his life. He was entranced. Vaughan laid himself out to keep every moment of his charge's time employed and George really enjoyed himself immensely; and Vaughan became much more hopeful, and wrote to Mr. Blenheim telling him that he believed he saw a change already.

After they had been away about a fortnight or three weeks Vaughan had the satisfaction of seeing George's voluminous correspondence materially diminish. He also saw that George, although keeping up a regular daily correspondence with Bella, did not write nearly such long letters to Vaughan's spirits rose in consequence.

George was getting more particular, too, as to what he did, where he went, what he ate and drank. Vaughan lived in the devout hope that in time he would become blind.

They spent a month in Paris, during which time George met a great many people and made some new friends, and as Vaughan wrote to Mr. Blenheim just before they left Paris, en route for a tour to the South of France, Switzerland, Italy and Greece:

"Holland has

Distinctly Improved,

and I am sure you would be very pleased and gratified. Its accent is, I think, far less pronounced, and he is really showing a remarkable aptitude for learning languages. I should say he would very soon speak quite excellent French. Moreover, his whole attitude toward life and conventions are improving.

"He is beginning to realize his dignity. You will, I am sure, be pleased when I tell you that he has consented to have a valet. I have got him a good man, and explained the position to him. He will prove useful. Holland has really improved in many ways. For instance, one very rarely finds him talking to the servants; he is less quarrelsome, more respectful to his betters and his position, and less inclined to give vent to his loudest laughs on provocation.

"In his office at Mapelin Mr. Blenheim read Vaughan's letter with immense satisfaction.

Another paragraph in the same letter pleased him greatly.

"Holland," wrote Vaughan, "is being made great fun of, and scorn of being granted accounts of his wealth are flying about, and he really does not realize it very freely. Acting on your instructions, I have refused to allow these jokes to go unnoticed, though I certainly consider that the enormous sums he insists on giving away to every charity, deserving or otherwise, a which makes an appeal to him ought to be checked.

"It is no exaggeration to say that he gives to everybody who asks. I saw him give a louis to a professional beggar yesterday morning and another to the same scoundrel in the evening because he told him that he had lost it.

"Let him do it," was Mr. Blenheim's comment. "He can afford it, and it will make him popular."

"Holland is equally prodigal in his entertainments," the letter continued. "We are living at the rate of about five thousand dollars a week. The result is, as you may well imagine, that he is literally surrounded by a Court of Sycophants.

"Quite right," said Mr. Blenheim; "the very best thing in the world for him."

"He is very popular with women," continued Vaughan, "though I am afraid the publicity he insists on giving to his engagement with Mrs. Saunders, who he insists on calling 'my Bella' to everyone, has a somewhat detrimental effect. There is an Italian woman, the widow of Prince Torrelando, a lovely creature, but without a penny in the world, who is making a good set at him. I have great hopes. I think she really likes him, quite apart from his money. He is about a lot with her, and gives her costly presents. There is another woman, an American, a Miss Cora Winthrope, of Texas, the daughter of Cyrus U. Winthrop.

"She is probably about the richest unmarried female in the world. She is doing her best to cut out la Principessa Torrelando. She is very pretty, in a different way; and I fancy Holland stands a little in awe of her. However, everything is going well, much better than I ever anticipated. I think you can rely on the reign of Bella, the Queen of the Ring, culling at a very early day."

Mr. Blenheim chuckled.

"Vaughan has his head screwed on the right way," he said; but he seat a telegram off at once to Paris.

See that nothing serious comes of Torrelando affair, and encourage Cora—Blenheim."

"No penniless Italian princess adventuress," he said emphatically. "An American multi-millionairess is another thing."

Meantime Bella Saunders received from and wrote daily love-letters to her George in Paris, utterly oblivious of which was being worked to rob her of him and his whole-hearted love.

The Skilful Scheme.

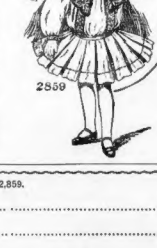
From Paris Vaughan conducted his rich charge to several show places in Switzerland and in the Rhone Valley. But George was not fond of sightseeing. He had seen life, and he wanted more.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Hearst's Boston American Pattern

Dainty Dress for a Little Miss



No. 2,859—It is not sufficient that a little girl's dress shall be pretty and becoming, but it must carry a style as well. Fortunately for the thrifty mother the materials for these little dresses are so exquisite and dainty that developing them becomes not a labor of love, it will be charming made of mull, batiste, dimity or wash chiffon. The one shown here is finished with a collar and bands of all-over lace or embroidery, the waist binned a little, and the bow-plaited skirt has feather-stitching above the hem. For medium size 4¾ yards of 27-inch material are necessary.

Pattern No. 2,859 is cut in four sizes, from 4 to 10 years.

Send 10 cents to obtain this pattern, postpaid, and the size, name and address to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 259, Boston, Mass.

RICH WIDOW IN LOVE ROMANCE WITH ACTOR

Mrs. Van Rensselaer and Husband, Also Playwright, on Their Honeymoon Here.

GROOM IS FROM BOSTON

Like a splendid romance from the pages of fiction reads the love story of Harold Rogers Woolf, the penniless playwright and writer, and his aristocratic bride, Josephine Van Rensselaer-Woolf, the former wealthy young widow of New York.

Woolf is a Boston boy, and he and his wife are passing a few days in this city. They are stopping at the Castle Square Hotel. They were married at Stonington on Wednesday. The young couple met in New York when the husband was attempting to make himself famous on the stage and wasn't quite so well.

In connection with his theatrical work he met the beautiful widow of F. Harold Van Rensselaer. The meeting, it is said, resulted in love at first sight.

Then Mr. Woolf beat all of his energies toward winning the hand of the rich widow. Six months ago it was reported that they were married at the little Church around the Corner in New York, but that rumor proved unfounded. Mr. and Mrs. Woolf will probably pass the Summer at Great Barrington and then go to her Fifth avenue home in New York.

To Escape Publicity.

"We are here for a few days to escape all the publicity possible, as my wife is greatly averse to such a thing," declared Mr. Woolf to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

"I know Boston very well, having spent the greater part of my life here, and I thought by taking apartments here for a few days we would not meet any of our friends, and would escape newspaper men especially. We arrived here late yesterday afternoon, and will go to Maine Monday, where we will have peace and quietness until we return late in the season to New York, where we will make our home."

Upon being informed that there was a rumor in New York that the bride had been married more than six months ago by Dr. Houghton, and that Wednesday's ceremony was a second marriage, young Woolf flushed and denied it, saying:

"That is all rot. Yesterday was our first marriage, and anyone telling that story is doing so to injure us. I have papers to prove that we were married only by the Rev. Howard Murray Dumbell, Wednesday, at Great Barrington."

Known at South End.

Woolf is known in the South End, where he lived until about six years ago, when he removed to New York. While he has always been interested in theatricals and has taken part in a few performances, he is known better as a playwright.

In applying for a marriage license at Great Barrington, he gave his age as twenty-seven and his birthplace as Boston. His wife in two years is his junior and she was born in Montreal, Que. Her home is in Fifth avenue, New York, where the couple will reside.

Mrs. Woolf's first marriage was in her teens to F. Harold Van Rensselaer. He died two years after the marriage and left her all his wealth. Her maiden name was Josephine Grinnell and she inherited a large fortune in her own right.

The marriage ceremony at Great Barrington was attended by many relatives and members of some of New York's richest families were present. It was performed at St. James's Church in Great Barrington at 5 o'clock, just one hour after Mr. Woolf had arrived from Boston.

THOUSANDS GO TO WINTHROP'S HOME CIRCUS

Little Willie of Winthrop, his pa and his ma and all the rest of the family were at the opening of the Winthrop Yacht Club circus, which began a three days' engagement on the circus grounds at Ocean Spray station last night. From early in the evening, when the barkers for the great and only side show began to bark and entice dimes into the treasury of the yacht club and friends into the little show before the doors of the big tent were opened, until late at night, after the population concert was over, the grounds were filled with people who had come in expectation for Winthrop's great, clever, home-produced circus.

The attendance at the side show, the big feature of which was estimated by those who should know as 2,000, filled the seats back to the ring solid for the remaining performances to-night, to-morrow matinee and to-morrow night.

Marvellous Freaks on View.

From 7:15 until 8 o'clock a great crowd filled the side-show tents where Lecturer Ralph G. Gowdy pointed out the wonders of the Dog-faced Boy, the Chinese Giant, the Siamese Twins, the Bearded Lady, the Snake Charmer, the Oldest Man in Winthrop and others of the freaks. In the meantime the big tent was filling up.

The scene in the big tent when the grand march began was in many ways typical of a circus, but in many others strangely novel. Everybody ate peanuts and munched corn. True. But the ushers were evening dress, as did many men and women in the audience.

The sixteen numbers composing the program of the big show were run off without a hitch. First came the grand march of the entire circus staff of entertainers, headed by the great and only Vegetable Band under the leadership of Professor Williams, who has an assistant bandmaster many of Winthrop's best known young men. All were costumed in weird uniforms, no two alike, and playing Civil War band instruments with which they were not at all familiar. The "Good Old Summer Time" and "Mother, Pin a Rose on Me" were the chief and only selections played during the evening.

There were some professional acts mingled with the amateur. Among the best of the turns were the musical rifle exercise by a detachment of soldiers from Fort Banks, and sword contests by the Seahoims and E. F. Bridges.

Horses Almost Human.

The lighter side of the performance was well taken care of. Signor Iron Ox did a strong man act with great weights which, later, a wee boy carried off when the ring was being cleared. Thomas Dunn, weight 200, dressed as a woman Arabian rider, strolled around on top of a lazy truck horse. Finally Charlie Dunn, necessary as the cloth, exhibited educated horses. They drilled, did track and wing dancing, and various stunts, while Mr. Bird cracked his whip and bowed.

The concert after the big show included some good singing, dancing and monologues, and a solo by the leader of the Vegetable Band.

HIBBARD IN MAINE.

HARRISON, Me., Aug. 4.—Postmaster George A. Hibbard of Boston was one of the speakers at the celebration of the centennial anniversary of this town.

RUSSELL SAGE IS 89 TO-DAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Russell Sage is 89 years old to-day, and the employes in the little offices on the fourth floor of No. 31 Nassau street will be much surprised if the aged financier fails to appear and read the legend ground out by the ancient stock ticker on its wooden stand in the corner near his desk.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Sage never takes a holiday on his natal day. "I've always been lucky on my birthday," is a byword with him. A downpour of rain kept him up-town on his birthday last year, and that fact is still a matter of grief to the aged man.

Letters of congratulation from friends and business associates of Mr. Sage began to arrive at the office yesterday afternoon, and it is expected his desk will be piled high with them to-day.

Although his wits are keen as ever, Mr. Sage's memory is failing him a little, and much of his business is now transacted by his subordinates. But his chief pride is in keeping up attendance at the directors' meetings of the many companies with which he is connected.

He is a director of the Wabash railroad, and at a recent meeting of the board Mr. Sage's absence was commented on.

At the close of the meeting several of the directors stood talking when the door opened and in came the aged financier. He had been delayed by a Western Union meeting.

"Ah, Mr. Sage," jokingly observed one of his associates, "there has been no chance for you to earn your fee to-day."

"Yes I will," insisted Mr. Sage, in a quavering voice, as he held out his shaking hand. "I want my pay."

And a crisp ten dollar bill was placed in the financier's hand.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

Instead of parading Labor Day Cambridge Central Labor Union has decided to hold a field day and sporting carnival on Cambridge Field, East Cambridge, all day and evening.

In the morning a long list of athletic events will be run off under the sanction of the N. E. A. A. U. Noted labor leaders will make addresses in the afternoon, when a baseball game will also be played between two teams to be announced later.

The festivities will conclude with a band concert and other features in the evening. Thomas J. Edwards is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

INCREASE FOR PILE DRIVERS.

The officers of Hoisting and Portable Engineers' Union state that the wage scale for the pile driving engineers who recently joined the union goes into effect August 15 without any friction whatever.

Instead of parading Labor Day the union will hold an "open house" at Engineers' Hall, No. 694 Washington street.

AID STRIKING MACHINISTS.

Treasurer A. W. Rockwell will represent Machinists' Lodge No. 264 at the State Branch, A. F. of L., convention to be held at Pittsfield in October.

The union has donated $25 to the machinists on strike in St. John's, Newfoundland. The election of grand lodge officers is now being held by a referendum vote. The polls will be open for the members of Lodge No. 264 every Thursday night this month at Machinists' Hall, Wells Memorial Building.

WALTHAM C. L. U. ELECTS.

Waltham Central Labor Union has elected the following officers:

President, R. D. Taylor; vice-president, F. McQuiggan; treasurer, M. Hines; financial secretary, J. Hendry; corresponding secretary, A. Kaveney; trustees, C. S. Sullivan, J. O'Brien and J. Copson; sergeant-at-arms, M. Cachrane.

LABOR NOTES.

At an open meeting of Engineers and Firemen's Assembly No. 1,628, K. of L., J. F. Conley described his invention, the steam valve rotary engine.

Provisional labor representatives will be present at the open meeting and installation of officers of the Cambridge United Labor Union at the headquarters, No. 622 Massachusetts avenue.

William B. Stone has resigned as secretary of the Cambridge and Central Labor Unions and also as delegate to both from Boston Lasters' Protective Union, No. 110, and has been succeeded by Andrew Mc. Stone will retain membership in Local No. 110.

J. K. Robinson of Denver, Col., International president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, has been in this city for Permanently, No. 31, where he is to organize the waiters and other hotel and restaurant help.

Cooks' Union No. 228 has reduced its initiation and reinstatement fees from $5 to $2 for a limited time. Hereafter the unions will meet at Writers' Hall, No. 1105 Washington street.

7 MILLS ON $1 FOR CREDITORS

CLEVELAND, Aug. 4.—Cassie L. Chadwick's creditors will get a total dividend of about seven mills on the dollar, when matters are finally adjusted, according to Referee in Bankruptcy Remington.

The total valuation of Mrs. Chadwick's assets amounts to about $25,000, from which must be deducted counsel and court fees amounting to $10,000, leaving about $15,000 with which to meet debts amounting to $2,000,000.

VICE-PRESIDENT HAS RECOVERED

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Aug. 4.—Vice-President Fairbanks has entirely recovered from the indisposition which necessitated his leaving the semi-Centennial reception. His illness was due to fatigue.

SHIPS AT BAR HARBOR.

BAR HARBOR, Aug. 4.—The battleships Maine, Kearsarge, Kentucky, Missouri, Alabama, Iowa and Massachusetts have arrived here. The Illinois left the fleet off the Nantucket lightship to experiment with her wireless telegraph apparatus and will follow after a week here some of the ships will go to Boston and the others to Portland.

VAN ALEN REMAINS LOYAL.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 4.—J. Lawrence Van Alen, son of James J. Van Alen, gave out a statement tonight denying his father intended to become a British subject.

UNKNOWN LIES NEAR TO DEATH

An unknown man is dying at the Emergency Hospital. He walked in and said he was not feeling well and wanted good attendance, and asked if he could stay a week. He paid the charge from a roll of bills, depositing the remainder in the safe. An examination disclosed that he was suffering from a severe attack of brain fever. He sank rapidly after going to bed and is expected to live only a few hours. Every effort on the part of the nurse to find out where he came from and who his people are was useless, and the man sank into unconsciousness without giving the people at the hospital any clue to his identity.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, AUGUST 4, 1905.

Governor, Let the Chimpanzee Smoke

He Can't Live Long, Anyhow. He Is a Beautiful "Horrible Example"

Nobody in the State of Indiana can legally smoke cigarettes or have them in his possession. An animal show bound for Indiana possesses an educated chimpanzee, who eats with a knife and fork AND smokes cigarettes.

Just how long it took his keepers to get his system saturated with cigarette poison, and make the poor animal crave that poison, we do not know.

The press agent of the chimpanzee, wise in his day, saw the value of the anti-cigarette law, combined with the chimpanzee's depraved passion.

He wrote a letter to the Governor, submitting a medical certificate from the chimpanzee's physician, saying that to deprive him of cigarettes would ruin his temper and make him dangerous to the other monkeys—and men.

These are facts furnished by our reader, Mr. E. B. Swift, and here is our comment, which we address respectfully to the Hon. J. Frank Hanley, Governor of the State of Indiana:

Governor, try, if you possibly can, to stretch a point and let the chimpanzee smoke.

You have an excellent law, one that will save the health of tens of thousands of children.

Now, with this cigarette smoking chimpanzee you can put before the people a "horrible example" that will do much to make public sentiment for the law and assist in its enforcement.

It can do no real harm to let the chimpanzee smoke—the poor thing can't live long, anyhow. He was doomed to a death by consumption the day he left his hot home.

It would pay even to hire the monkey for a few days, and let him smoke publicly on the steps of the State House, or on an elevated platform at the most crowded point in the city of Indianapolis.

The people, and especially little boys, would realize a few truths when they saw the chimpanzee puffing away at his cigarettes.

They would hear him cough and wheeze, and they would see his bleary eyes.

They would say to themselves:

"That isn't a very healthy chimpanzee. And he doesn't look very intelligent.

"The poor thing imitated the cigarette habit from men—you can hardly blame him.

"But, at least, I wouldn't imitate a chimpanzee. No cigarettes for me."

The Governor or the Mayor might stand up beside the chimpanzee and say to the crowds of little boys:

"Little boys, smoke cigarettes, IF you want to be a chimpanzee.

"And DON'T smoke cigarettes, if you want to be like George Washington, or Lincoln, or me."

It ought to be a very effective sermon—because it would be easily understood.

A good traveling show, with a chimpanzee smoking cigarettes, a baboon chewing tobacco, a congenital idiot betting on the races, a mongoose drinking whiskey and afraid of the snakes created by its imagination, would be extremely impressive.

If the people could be made to understand that the lower animals are all ready to adopt our vices, and that it is absolutely impossible for them to adopt our virtues, or our capacity for thought, it would be seen by boys that it is possible to be a man without the vice of this poor chimpanzee.

Chauncey Depew and Hypocrisy

Not HIS Hypocrisy, but That of Those Who Fawned on Him Formerly and Denounce Him Now

Our readers know well what the attitude of the Hearst newspapers has been toward Senator Depew and his election to the United States Senate.

We tried without success to prevent his election—without success, because the people have nothing to say about it, and many of the gentlemen in the Legislature who have the voting power have characters about which the least said the better.

Each time that Mr. Depew was elected we pointed out the fact that he represented in the Senate, NOT the State of New York and its inhabitants, but the New York Central Railroad and its owners. We did not attack him or his case as unusually vicious. He is a very fair sample of the United States Senate—more cheerful than most of the members, more honest than many, no doubt.

A depressing feature in connection with the sudden violent attack on Senator Depew—even more discouraging than the recent revelation concerning Mr. Depew and the Equitable—is the hypocrisy of the violent flood of attack let loose upon him.

The people that attack him now HAVE KNOWN ALL THE TIME MR. DEPEW'S CHARACTER. They have known perfectly well whom and what he represented.

It is certainly a depressing sign of the times when a hundred editors that applauded the sending of Depew to the United States Senate—to the actual lawmaking body of the nation—should now get so excited about his acts as a director of the Equitable company.

Is our republican system of government actually and entirely a farce in the estimation of these editors and others that so violently attack Depew?

Is there absolutely NOTHING of any importance in America except some little definite amount of money? Will nothing else arouse the interest of the public and of the editors?

The newspapers that had nothing to say against Depew's election to the Senate knew that they were sending TO MAKE THE LAWS OF THE COUNTRY a man who for years had been the professional lobbyist for the Vanderbilts—a man who represented the Vanderbilt railroad interests, and in no sense at all the people of New York.

For our part, we are inclined to feel sympathy for this old man, so vigorously kicked to-day by his supporters of yesterday.

He must wonder, indeed, what has come over the world, that they should make such a fuss about a vote at a board of directors' meeting, and give him carte blanche to cast any vote he likes in the Senate of the United States.

We repeat that it is really depressing:

First, to see a Vanderbilt employe and lobbyist sent to the United States Senate with practically no protest whatever from the people or the other newspapers—outside of one yellow journal;

Second, to see the extraordinary energy with which this same man is kicked when he is down, the wonderful excitement aroused by a question of a few dollars, following upon absolute indifference as to the lawmaking machinery of the nation.

The country will be much better off when it shall be able to take in questions of government and lawmaking an interest equal to that which it displays in a money question, that alone seems to have power to appeal to the American imagination.

Saratoga in the Grip of the Demon Chance

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

SATURNALIA! That is the only word that can adequately describe the situation in which Saratoga now finds itself.

The Decalogue? If Saratoga ever heard of such thing she has clean forgotten it, and, mad with the gambling mania, she is running amuck through all the known rules and principles of ethical propriety and moral obligation!

At the feast of Belshazzar, if we may credit the stories that have come down to us, there was much of madness and hysteria, but the madness that now has Saratoga in its grip, the wild nervousness which sits upon the place like a nightmare, exceeds that in the midst of which the old king and his minions perished.

"What is the chief end of man?" Go to Saratoga, and they will give you the off-hand, emphatic answer: "To gamble!"

"If there is a Hell," said some one hundreds of years ago, "it is right under Rome."

The same might have been said of Corinth, of Capri, of Antioch and of Antioch's famous suburb, the Grove of Daphne.

The same might be said to-day of Monte Carlo.

And the same, too might be said of Saratoga.

It is doubtful if in any of the gilded, alluring vice centres of antiquity—in Rome, or Corinth, or Capri, or Antioch—there existed such subtle and effective means of destroying soul and body as are in operation right now in this same Saratoga.

While I write, the greatest gambling carnival in the history of the American turf is in full swing, and husbands and wives, fathers and daughters, mothers and sons, side by side and wild with excitement, are vieing with one another in the nerve-wrecking, soul-demoralizing game of "playing the races."

A hundred bookmakers are hard at it, raking in the bets which twice ten thousand frenzied men and women are trying to push into their hands!

In the meantime the clubs all over the place are "wide open." Music sounds, a thousand allurements call, every device that human ingenuity, spurred on by the love of gold, can think of to lure the victim is resorted to.

The palaces smile, the glitter charms and, going in, the victim finds himself in Hell.

Wise as serpents, considerate as angels, but in their hearts cruel and remorseless as demons, the gentlemen who run the palaces transform their patrons into paupers, maniacs, suicides—and then blandly smile as they count up their ill-gotten gains.

If the Devil ever laughs—and they say he sometimes does—he will literally crack his sides as, during the next thirty days, he shall think of Saratoga.

When will this demoralization of men and women come to an end?

Possibly when the moths cease to swarm about the arc light that consumes them.

"What fools these mortals be!" exclaims Puck—and how very right Puck is!

Putting all moral considerations quite aside, who that is not a fool does not know that in the end gambling fails to pay?

In the end it is always a losing business.

Its promises are fair. The dream that it inspires is beautiful. But in the end it is Hell!

Censure is the tax a man pays to the public for being eminent.

Dinkelspiel's Letters to His Son Looey---No. II.

By George V. Hobart

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner.

MEIN LIEBER LOOEY.—I haf received your letter vich gifs me your intention to leave der sea-shore und vent to der mountains for a cubble of veeks.

Go vare you vish to, Looey. I like to see young peoples enchoy demselfs, because in dese modern days it costs young peoples fifty dollars for abould four pounds of enchoyment vich ven I vas a young people I could get der same amount for fifty cents.

It vas very pleasant und quiet here at home mit der eggseption of your leedle brother, Henry, vich found my life insurance policy in der bureau und made it into a kite for der purpose of flying it in der air ould. Ven I got der policy back from vare it vas tangled in der tellyfone vires I found dot Henry hat removed der entire Board of Directors mit der scissors, und twenty-sefen clauses showing vy der company should not pay der policy ven I denise myself vas also missing.

I scolded Henry aboud dis inabordination, but mit a chesture from der left hand he stopped me und eggsclaimed, "Vait, father! it vas true dot I made a kite of your life insurance policy, but ain'd it better for me to do dis den to haf der life insurance company make a monkey of you, yes?"

Your brother Henry is smart for a boy dot has only used up eight years, I believe it.

By all means go to der mountains, Looey, und cause yourself some enchoyment. I haf no vish to constrain you in der pursuit of pleasure, only I hope you vill vent to vork ven you come home und not stood round der corners bragging aboud how much it cost you to put each a sunburn on your elbows.

Ven I vas a boy, Looey, vacation days vas few und far behind, und if I vas pushed off der dock und hat to haf a good svim for my life twice in vun Summer I vas lucky.

Ve vas all vell at home und eferyding vas peaceful mit der eggseption of your mother vich concluded dot she vas getting too fat, so she secured a passion for physical torture to tease herself thinner.

Last night aboud twelve o'clock she hat an attack of Indian clubs, von of vich vas contagious because it settled on my chest und spoiled my singing voice. Den she became attached to a pair of dumb bells und struggled mit dem for five minutes until ven of dem left her und vent ouid through der bedroom vindow, vich caused a rush of policemen to der scene.

For my part I dink fatness is no crime, but a angry dumb bell in der hands of a veak voman is der gateway vich leads ould on der road to ruin.

Let us hear from you, Looey, ven you reach der mountains, und if dare vas any spare room in your letter after you get through asking for more money use it up to description der scenery.

All der family sends luff mit der eggception dot I send a check vich vill speak for itself. Mit best vishes,

D. DINKELSPIEL.
